by Others in House.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Evans, of 452
Grosvenor street, and three members of their family were made very ill early on Thursday morning by the escape of gas from a furnace. Mrs. Evans was taken ill during the night, and got up and was making her way into another room, when she was overcome and fell to the floor. Her husband some time later got up and was endeavoring to get her back to her room when he was overcome. Other members of the family were sent for and cared for them, but were also made ill. An investigation was made, and the trouble was found to be a hole in the furble wouth, stricken with an attack of acute indigestion last evening bundas street bridge about 7 o'clock, died a few minutes later. The coal business in London is much the same as any other commercial enterprise, and to the credit of the coal men they have not as a rule unduly increased the price of fuel to their customers.

That the citizens will find out when too late that coal is not in the same class as water and electricity. Coal is subject to a foreign market quotation and conditions, while the latter is a local monopoly pure and simple. Under a municipal system if anybody gets cheaper coal it will be at the expense of the general taxpayer. he was found to be a hole in the furnace through which gas had made its escape. Mr. and Mrs. Evans are the parents of Rev. Charles Evans of St. Ham passiacro, Church, West London.

The Shriners held their spring ceremoniai yesterday at the Masonic Temple, 54 candidates being taken over the hot sands. They were real not sands, judging from the sounds of sands, judging from the sounds of terror that tumbled out of the building, particularly in the evening.

The session was a very quiet one, little business being transacted. There were no visiting patrols or bands, and the outside performances and parades were cut off. However, there was a good crowd of memoers present. Visitors from Mecca, New York; Medinah, Chicago; Taballah, Rockford Ill.; Ismaila, Buffalo; El Khurafeh, Saginaw; Wawa, Regina; Karnack, Montreal; and Rameses, Toronto, were introduced.

LEGAL ASPECTS OF CHURCH UNION.

further heard from on the subject. Remarks have been made upon the act that the chief justice has descended ontroversy upon questions which at any time may come before the courts; but there is really in that fact a sign t good Presbyterian blood flows in s veins, notwithstanding his leaning towards church union with its proposed diluted docurine and discipline. The en-joyment of his rights as a member and office-bearer of the Presbyterian Church in Canada evidently has weighed more with him than considerations regarding his civil official dignity. But when heaters the arena of ecclesiastical con-

Children's Rights Include Good Shoes to be a departure from the constitution of the "Free Church of Scotland," which thereby lost its identity. Yet there are people among the advocates of union who have publicly maintained that even if the "basis of union" displace the Westminster standards, the church would preserve its identity. The judges and lawyers, on both sides of the Free Church ease, would have stood aghast at any such plea. The outcome of the case has been to confirm the principle advocated in Canada, in advance of the judgment, that the creed of a church, being that which determines the church, cannot be altered by a majority to the detriment of a minority, and that the property abides with the creed. The chief justice, however, admits, as the resolution of the last general assembly also stipulates, that legislation must be had to secure the property for the United Church, otherwise it would be lost to that body; and, of course, it would remain in the hands of those who remain loyal to the system for the maintaining and promoting of which it exists.

In referring to the legislation by the British Parliament, after the decision in the Free Church case, the chief justice omitted to mention that the principle of the act recognized that those who maintained the tenets of the Free Church of Scotland in their integrity to whom the court had adjudged the property, and wherever there was a sufficient number to constitute a congregation, although a minority of the former undivided congregation the property was assigned to them; and so, of the different funds of the church, whenever the minority could show that they were capable of using the funds, these were allocated to them, under the Lord
