LATE POPE'S WILL

Rome, March 3.—The late Pope Benedict when he died was possessed of no property "except those few belongings which before my assumption of the Roman pontificate were already publicly registered in my name and located in the communes of Pagli, near Genoa and Bologna."

These belongings were left by him to his nephew, the son of his brother Giovanni Antonio Della Chiesa. The pontiff disposed of all his personal estate after his elevation.

"These facts became known today when the will of Benedict was opened. It was dated Feb. 20, 1916, and its contents indicated that it was drawn while the Pope reflected on the terrors of the war."

BLACK FOXES AT SUSSEX.

Near Sussex there are two large black fox ranches, The Kings County Silver Black Fox and Fur Co., Ltd., and the Silver Black Foxes, Ltd., both of which are forging ahead and with much success.

A visit to the Sussex ranches is most interesting. Many of the silver foxes are very tame and will eat candy or biscuit from one's hand. They will come right up to the wire netting, showing little fear of visitors.

The whole fox enterprise, which was unduly inflated a few years ago, is now down to hard pan and has become an industry of noteworthy proportions.

GIRLS' BRANCH OFFICERS.
