

General Business.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and makes possible the preparation of the most delicate and delicious cakes.

It is a matter of serious concern to the people who are leaving us mainly of the class to which we ought naturally to look as the successors, our farmers and other home-steads, of those who, in a few years, will have to leave to others the cares and duties which they have so long sustained.

IN CASKS AND BARRLS

GEORGE WATT, MEAT STALLS.

HOMAS BUCKLEY

MEAT STALLS.

THE STAR SAFETY RAZOR.

PATENTED JUNE 1880. MEDAL OF SUPERORITY AWARDED.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE 1884. THE BEST. RAZOR IN USE.

Sent by mail to any address a receipt of price, TWO DOLLARS AND FIFTY CENTS.

G. STOHART, Chatham NB.

Northern & Western Ry.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

In Effect July 11th 1887.

TRAINS RUN ON EASTERN STANDARD TIME.

Passenger and Freight Trains will have eleven weekly (Monday) exceptions for Chatham.

RETURNS, LEAVE CHATHAM.

TO ARRIVE, and expected about the 12th August, per Schr LEONARD and on a cargo of...

Old ines Sydney Coal.

VICTORIA MINES Coal.

This cargo will be sold from the Vessel at a small advance on cost.

T. F. Gillespie.

COAL!

TO ARRIVE, and expected about the 12th August, per Schr LEONARD and on a cargo of...

Old ines Sydney Coal.

VICTORIA MINES Coal.

This cargo will be sold from the Vessel at a small advance on cost.

T. F. Gillespie.

COAL!

TO ARRIVE, and expected about the 12th August, per Schr LEONARD and on a cargo of...

Old ines Sydney Coal.

VICTORIA MINES Coal.

This cargo will be sold from the Vessel at a small advance on cost.

T. F. Gillespie.

COAL!

TO ARRIVE, and expected about the 12th August, per Schr LEONARD and on a cargo of...

Old ines Sydney Coal.

VICTORIA MINES Coal.

This cargo will be sold from the Vessel at a small advance on cost.

T. F. Gillespie.

COAL!

TO ARRIVE, and expected about the 12th August, per Schr LEONARD and on a cargo of...

Old ines Sydney Coal.

VICTORIA MINES Coal.

This cargo will be sold from the Vessel at a small advance on cost.

T. F. Gillespie.

COAL!

TO ARRIVE, and expected about the 12th August, per Schr LEONARD and on a cargo of...

Old ines Sydney Coal.

VICTORIA MINES Coal.

Miramichi Advance.

CHATHAM, N. B., SEPTEMBER 1, 1887.

Never Say Die!

As the lumbering industry of the North Shore is unmistakably becoming less attractive to capitalists, because its returns have, of late been so far from satisfactory, there is an active spirit of enquiry abroad among our people as to the directions in which their energies may, in future, be directed, in order that, as the time-honored business wanes, other sources of industrial employment and wealth may be made to contribute to the general maintenance of the communities interested. It is a regrettable fact that during the last four or five years there has been a considerable exodus going on among the most able and valuable classes of our population, simply because their accustomed employment has been growing less and less in volume; and it is a matter seriously affecting the future of the country that the people who are leaving us are mainly of the class to which we ought naturally to look as the successors, our farmers and other home-steads, of those who, in a few years, will have to leave to others the cares and duties which they have so long sustained. The increased development of some existing industry, or the creation of new ones is, therefore, a necessity to the maintenance of the community in even its present station, to say nothing of its keeping pace with the general progress that all communities should, in the natural order of things, make.

In the past twenty years the country has passed through momentous political changes, and there are few among us who do not realize that these have, by no means, promoted the interests of New Brunswick. Notwithstanding that many, honestly no doubt, entertained a belief in a development of manufactures and of our shipping interests which would compensate us for all we surrendered by the federal compact, the cheerless fact is fully apparent that we made a foolish bargain, by which we were crippled in our resources, hampered in our natural trade-relations, deprived of our legitimate revenue and yet taxed as largely as the more favored provinces, to which we are practically but contributory appendages and customers, without adequate reciprocal advantages. Situated, as we are at one end of a vast territory, and being in the interior of the larger provinces, practically shut out from enjoying legitimate trade relations with the neighbors we were always accustomed to deal with, our position is one that requires watchful and intelligent effort on our part if we would hold our own as a people; and while we may and must agitate in every legitimate way for more equitable consideration than we have, heretofore, received from our rulers, the best guarantee of our future prosperity lies in an independent and self-reliant effort to profit by the natural advantages which surround us.

An experience of more than twenty years has quite dispelled the delusion that two great effects of confederation would be the creation and maintenance of manufacturing on the North Shore, and the enlargement of its ship-building and ship-owning interests. Our streams, on which prophesying politicians conjured up mills and factories to be born under the aegis of the federal dispensation, still run idle on the sea, which, in its turn, has ceased to bear the tonnage that was, in the good old days not long ago, one of our proudest boasts. Confederation has not, as we are concerned, and the least National Policy has only added to the burdens to be borne by our industries, which flourished twenty years ago, but are obliged, now, to fight a losing battle under its blighting influence.

It is true, therefore, that there has been and is much to discourage our people, but there does not appear to be any good reason for our not looking hopefully to the future, in view of our rich resources of land and water. We may not, perhaps, comment on the lumber business, as hitherto carried on, ever booming as it has done here or elsewhere in the province, but time, which works such wondrous changes, will, no doubt, develop new phases of the wood trade that we little dream of. Communication by steam, on land and water, is making great strides, and with the roads that will, probably, be opened, and the steamboat lines established in a few years, who can tell what the requirements of the near future may call into existence? We are just beginning to realize the possibilities of the fishery wealth that lies very near to us. It is most remarkable that while we have been so much absorbed in the lumber business, our Bay Chaleur, Miramichi Bay, Straits and other waters have been sought by thousands of men from points hundreds and thousands of miles away in pursuit of fish which we, practically, never thought of catching, and it was only last year that the first Miramichi vessel ever fitted out in a regular way for mackerel fishing was seen in these waters. This year we have four of them, and while they have, so far, in common with the general fleet, not taken large fares, their catch has been up to or above the average. Their good or ill luck however, cannot alter the fact that the future interests of the North Shore are largely involved in a more extensive development of our fisheries. Last year there were over one thousand sail of American fishermen alone on the coasts of the Maritime Provinces, the greater part of them being in New Brunswick north shore waters or in a day or two's sail of them. There are hundreds of Nova Scotia vessels in the same waters. If there was not money in the business, these vessels would not embark there, for they always share the luck of the voyage and their experience encourages them to continue in the business, from father to son, as they have done for nearly a century. The mackerel fishery, however, is not so rich with our waters as it was, for our fishery is even more valuable, because it furnishes a more general article of food, and it is not yet fully developed. Our fishermen and shippers have made the salmon and trout fisheries a large and important part of their business. These two items of export are of the highest importance to us as contributors to our commercial income, but our cod and mackerel fisheries, if properly developed, will give us much greater returns; and as there are more fully engaged in the pursuit, will, no doubt, lead to the opening up of other branches of the fishing business. We refer to these matters at the present time because we think our doing so may encourage a good many who take a desponding view of the future, simply because times are admittedly very bad and business very dull. "Never say die" is a good motto, and although we are handicapped by our unfortunate political position, this world is not so rich with things, after a period of hard times there must come one of prosperity. To assist in bringing about the change we must bestir ourselves and take advantage of all the openings for work—new and old—that present themselves, knowing that Providence helps those who help themselves.

As an example of what enterprise may do in the fishing industry our readers will be interested in a Chatham man's description of a fish trap that has been brought to the North Shore this season by a Nova Scotia concern. The gentleman who describes the trap is a well known and successful fisherman, and his description of a fish trap that has been brought to the North Shore this season by a Nova Scotia concern. The gentleman who describes the trap is a well known and successful fisherman, and his description of a fish trap that has been brought to the North Shore this season by a Nova Scotia concern.

Next morning we visited the great mackerel trap that is set off Grand Anse beach, two or three miles distant, where we arrived in time to board the lighter just leaving the dock for the morning's work. My friend and I stepped on board and in a short time were in the view of the immense device which the wary mackerel, our boat in command and the fisherman, were to be seen in the distance. A young man passing, very cunningly removed the c in class, thus changing it to lass. The Professor appeared shortly afterwards and noticing what had been done very quickly returned to the in lass which he had written on the notice then read: "Prof. B.—will be unable to meet his class this afternoon."

Some students are remarkably clever, especially those who have just left home. One day a Professor, leaving his hat on a chair by the door of his class-room, continued the lecture, at the close of which, whilst leaving the room one of the Freshmen dropped a paper into the said hat, with the word double inscribed thereon. Making no secret of what he had done, the Professor, in passing, continued the lecture, at the close of which, whilst leaving the room one of the Freshmen dropped a paper into the said hat, with the word double inscribed thereon. Making no secret of what he had done, the Professor, in passing, continued the lecture, at the close of which, whilst leaving the room one of the Freshmen dropped a paper into the said hat, with the word double inscribed thereon.

"It is a very curious French Professor, eager to learn the mysterious workings of a hand of students within the closed doors of his class-room, gently knocked 'Who's there?' cried several voices in the same breath. "It is," squeaked the Professor. "Oh! Oh! echoed a dozen voices all at once, 'What bad grammar. Who's that?'"

"It is," squeaked the Professor. "Oh! Oh! echoed a dozen voices all at once, 'What bad grammar. Who's that?'"

"It is," squeaked the Professor. "Oh! Oh! echoed a dozen voices all at once, 'What bad grammar. Who's that?'"

Stealing our Fish. The Sun of Saturday last published the following editorial paragraph: "Another case of alleged negligence on the part of the fishery protection fleet has collapsed. The Miramichi Advance has been asserting that two American scows had taken about 100 barrels each of mackerel on Miramichi Bay, and arguing from the premises that the cruisers were not protecting the fisheries. Captain Quigley, of the Hulet, hearing this charge, asked the pilots who had watched the signing and had given the information to the paper, if possible, the exact spot where the capture took place. The location was found to be three and a half miles from the nearest shore. The Advance publishes the revised version of the facts, which is an unusually handsome thing for a 'git paper' to do."

We are always prepared, when we have criticised those who fail in their public duties—whether it be individuals or departments—to afford them every opportunity for explanation or defence. Our publication of the Capt. Quigley's explanation of the matter referred to is a surprise to the Sun since chiefly from two causes. The first is that it never was known to afford the many who have seen the subjects of its attacks the slight opportunity for self-defence, and the second, that for some reason, unknown to us, it is in the habit of ignoring the Advance—its ignorance of our mode of dealing with public matters being, therefore, not unintelligible.

What the Advance asserted in reference to the two American fishermen's trespass on Miramichi Bay was quite true, as was also its statement that the facts of the case showed that our protective service was not so effective as it should be. We did not know at the time that the captain of the cruisers were not required to prevent fishing by Americans on Miramichi Bay, and that three miles from the shore, following their simities, was the acknowledged limit of Canadian jurisdiction. That, however, is apparently the position accepted by our government, its cruisers and organs. It is one that is not in accordance with the highest interpretations of either British or American authorities on the subject, and only shows the extent to which the government at Ottawa is disposed to surrender the important rights at stake.

As a matter of fact, there are no national rights in sight where the trespass took place. Had there been the Americans would have taken good care not to fish where they did. At the time they were taking the fish they intimated to our people that they knew they were violating the law.

Some of our Professors.

Fun, of the richest and most refined character, is reflected from the professorial chair. Students, as a rule, being always on the alert for a joke at the Professor's expense, though the latter are often like esch-tard to "catch," "dances" with certain principles heretofore advocated by prominent officials—"expatriate" in referring to the "expatriation" of the "conservative" in the "recent" of this country.

Perhaps he thinks them more wonderful now than formerly. A well known Professor in Scotland being unable to meet his afternoon appointment, intimated the same by writing in the board: "Prof. B.—will be unable to meet his class this afternoon." Hereafter let no man say that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

coming in the old Doctor's society. At one of our boardings schools in which the rector exercised a liberal supervision over the dormitories, much to the distaste of the young occupants, it chanced that in an upper hall the several rooms opened off the long corridor at either end, by a flight of stairs, midway in the corridor, the room occupied by the most popular boy of the school, who was in the habit of giving nightly entertainments to the other occupants of the flat, whose curiosity was aroused by the fact that he frequently tip-toed up stairs and along the hall peering through the key-hole of the said room. For these nightly errands his costume usually consisted of a night-gown, smoking cap and slippers, made for the purpose. The frequency of these visits aroused the consciousness of being watched annoyed the boys beyond endurance and it was finally resolved that a stop be put thereto. The plan was concocted and carried out, and the boys were satisfied when silence reigned again throughout the immense building, save the uproar in the usual room, and long after the tower-clock had struck the hour of midnight, the rector was heard according the stair at the head of which a sentinel had been placed. Down the corridor went the ruff of the cloth-slippers. The troublesome door was reached and when about to place his eye to the key-hole, a loud yell escaped the sentinel at the landing. Nervous, and struck by his own conscience the rector made a frantic rush for the opposite landing and down the stairs like a flash, but these stairs had previously been strewn with sharp tacks which had a very penetrating effect upon the cloth-slippers. The guilty rector made his last nocturnal visit to those quarters and, indeed, his whereabouts was unknown to the boys for several days after that ever-memorable night.

Some of our Professors. Fun, of the richest and most refined character, is reflected from the professorial chair. Students, as a rule, being always on the alert for a joke at the Professor's expense, though the latter are often like esch-tard to "catch," "dances" with certain principles heretofore advocated by prominent officials—"expatriate" in referring to the "expatriation" of the "conservative" in the "recent" of this country.

Perhaps he thinks them more wonderful now than formerly. A well known Professor in Scotland being unable to meet his afternoon appointment, intimated the same by writing in the board: "Prof. B.—will be unable to meet his class this afternoon." Hereafter let no man say that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

now was the time for the Government to show that it was not a government of wrong. But the Government struck from the list and declined the challenge. They had substituted an arbitrary will for regular legal action. This principle was a most dangerous and dangerous one in any country, and especially in Ireland. Law in Ireland was still on trial. A great misfortune was that those who administered it, especially locally, were not in sympathy with the feelings of the people. The proclamation of the National League, Mr. Gladstone declared, was a near approach to the declaration of war on the Irish people. The people of Ireland generally sympathized with the League because they believed that it had been their salvation. (Parnellite cheers.) Nobody did anything for the tenants until the League was founded. The Government were pressing Ireland very hard, and it was evident that they intended to work and act by summary jurisdiction. The Government's action absolutely excluded the Irish people from any right of appeal, and rendered void the provisions of the law under the statute. Their cognizance of the proclamation was reduced to a mere formality. There would be no jury, judge or resident magistrate and no parliament to control Ireland. There would be nothing but the absolute unmitigated arbitrary act of a few men, who would be equally arbitrary in their decisions. (Cheers.) The people would be no brighter and livelier. (Cheers.) The Government's action was a near approach to the declaration of war on the Irish people. The people of Ireland generally sympathized with the League because they believed that it had been their salvation. (Parnellite cheers.) Nobody did anything for the tenants until the League was founded. The Government were pressing Ireland very hard, and it was evident that they intended to work and act by summary jurisdiction. The Government's action absolutely excluded the Irish people from any right of appeal, and rendered void the provisions of the law under the statute. Their cognizance of the proclamation was reduced to a mere formality. There would be no jury, judge or resident magistrate and no parliament to control Ireland. There would be nothing but the absolute unmitigated arbitrary act of a few men, who would be equally arbitrary in their decisions. (Cheers.) The people would be no brighter and livelier. (Cheers.)

Some of our Professors. Fun, of the richest and most refined character, is reflected from the professorial chair. Students, as a rule, being always on the alert for a joke at the Professor's expense, though the latter are often like esch-tard to "catch," "dances" with certain principles heretofore advocated by prominent officials—"expatriate" in referring to the "expatriation" of the "conservative" in the "recent" of this country.

Perhaps he thinks them more wonderful now than formerly. A well known Professor in Scotland being unable to meet his afternoon appointment, intimated the same by writing in the board: "Prof. B.—will be unable to meet his class this afternoon." Hereafter let no man say that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

never attain primary objects by constitutional means. Mr. Hainwood accused the orange society of more intimidating than any society ever charged to the league. Under certain circumstances boycotting is justifiable and necessary. (Cheers from anti-terrestrial benches.) Lord Hartington said the question for present decision was whether the previous policy which had been so successful, should be followed by the present government if the franchise of the League became more rampant. So far as the action of the association was wholly political it could not be condemned, but if the action of the association destroyed the liberty of the people and subverted the order of government, it did not matter what the supposed motives of the association were. It was enough that the action was hostile to social order. (Cheers.) The house had already decided that intimidation prevailed, preventing persons from pursuing lawful occupations. It was not the duty of the government to lay before the House of Commons the details of the information destroyed by the opposition. The crimes act was now law. Action was taken by the government as the executive. It is not necessary to produce evidence in support of charges. He contradicted the reports that he disagreed with the government upon the proposal. He believed the League's aim was to secure an unjustified extension of the franchise. The League's aim was to secure an unjustified extension of the franchise. The League's aim was to secure an unjustified extension of the franchise.

Some of our Professors. Fun, of the richest and most refined character, is reflected from the professorial chair. Students, as a rule, being always on the alert for a joke at the Professor's expense, though the latter are often like esch-tard to "catch," "dances" with certain principles heretofore advocated by prominent officials—"expatriate" in referring to the "expatriation" of the "conservative" in the "recent" of this country.

Perhaps he thinks them more wonderful now than formerly. A well known Professor in Scotland being unable to meet his afternoon appointment, intimated the same by writing in the board: "Prof. B.—will be unable to meet his class this afternoon." Hereafter let no man say that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest, British Columbia, etc. But we would like to ask the Advance how it comes that fresh salmon, with net marks on their sides, are to be seen in the markets of this city, and how it comes that "one swallow does not make a summer."

It will occur to most people, we think, that even if the guardianship of the Southwest were so much improved, the fact would not warrant the broad statement of the Inspector, when it is well known that there is no guarantee whatever in the matter of trout and the spearing and illegal netting of salmon in the Northwest,