COUNTRY MARKET.

Buyers of berries grumbled on Saturday, for the scarcity of strawberries had caused the price to go up. The crop of native berries has been very small, and the supply of the cultivated variety has fallen off a good deal. New potatoes are now quite plentiful, and beans, peas and all kinds of garden truck, Lamb is a little easier. The supply of fowl appears to be fully equal to the demand. Butter and eggs, and meats generally show no change at all from week to week.
