St. Andrew's church, as part of the old past which younger western eyes see in the drurried trip through historic Quebec, and now in the institutions of this city, will keep for a fortnight both honorable memories and living issues before the assembly. It requires a search through the sketch printed in the handbook to learn who were the men inhose tablets are creeted in the church. They show us that the mighty have fallen in all ages, and all provinces.

doctor in this important and difficult line of pulpit work. He is favorably known also in Scotland as an able preacher and fresh thinker. Dr. John Campbell, of the Presbyterian College, Montreal, is also looked to as a coming moderator. His many old students are not by any means the forces behind his nomination. Probably since the passing of Principal Grant he is the ablest of our literary doctors. But he is young enough not only to enhance his standing as a scholar and writer, but also to merit the chair of the assembly. Dr. Falconer, of Pictou (N. S.), as a very able and worthy easterner, is too well known in this city to require ex-

There is always a good attendance, but no pressing for admittance. The absence of exciting issues is one reason for average audiences, and possibly the amount of balloting detains many who would other wise attend. It was a very businesslike assembly which greeted the moderator as he opened the proceedings last evening. On the platform were seated in addition to the master of the church and Principal on the platform were seated in addition to the pastor of the church and Principal Patrick, of Winnipeg, the two clerks of the assembly, Doctors Warden and Campbell. In the audience on his right were seated Doctors Lyle, Herdman, Bryce, McLaren, Vorrest, Falconer, and other professors, evenors and agents. On the left sattors Gordon, Carmichael, Seringer, erville, Scott and other men on whom church's work specially rests. It was principles in the east. Herdman and

To know the varied character of ac charges now held by these men internal character of the Presbyterian church which here assembles from all corners of the Dominion.

The commissioners do not appear from the commissioners are commissioners.

The commissioners do not appear from their dress to be a very high church body of men. But when it is noted that one half are laymen, who will share equally in the deliberations with their clerical breth-the deliberations with their clerical brethren, an explanation is given. It is a democratic court.

Sermons which are read are not popular, but it is now considered the correct thing for the ruling moderator so to act. Doctor Eletcher can dispense with the paper, and it is hoped that Doctor Milligan will not break his extempore record by conforming to the rule. The election of Doctor Milligan is a popular one, and when it is remembered that he was up at the last Hamilton assembly four years ago, it is true that everything comes to him who waits.

The docket of business do not leave themselves unprotected from the dry tale of figures, for the doctor complained at a former assembly of being crowded out of space enough, to give his report, while yesterday he announced that he was called upon before he had all his ammunition at hand.

Dr. Patrick came early into evidence as a wide awake and critical observer. He had failed to find after all Dr. Torrance's columns the figures which might prove to a stranger the real nature of our progress in the west, and thus lamented such omission. Just here, it is well to remark that Over 300 ministers and elders have gathered at St. John as commissioners to the twenty-fifth general assembly. A year ago the Presbyterian church sent her representatives to the extreme west of the Dominion of Canada, and the meeting thus in Vancouver will long be remembered. It is to the eastern limit that they have now some and from the personnel of the deleof attending the assembly, the invariable absence of irregular attendance of many prominent men may be the subject of remark. The truth is that the quid of the committee mill is so slow and incessant come and from the personnel of the delegates and the business in hand, as well as the ideal city in location and hospitality, this assembly will rank with any of its

He can always be counted upon be-cause of his close touch with the work of the church, to preach a sermon which will move the hearts of the audience and indicate the future policy of the church on its pressing duties. The moderator is one of best types of our grand old men, as his reputation in Hamilton (Ont.) and throughout the whole church clearly

The first important act of the assembly is to elect a successor to the moderator ship, who will preside over the court at ship, who will preside over the court at present convened, and remain in office for a year. It is desirable that there should be unanimity in the choice, although it frequently happens that there is a close race. There are hints given by presbyteries during the spring meetings of likely candidates, although this may bear no influence upon the final vote. Dr. John Somerville, of Owen Sound, had been so proposed, and is well known and popular among the majority of the commissioners. among the majority of the commissioners He has long been prominent in home mis-sion executive work. Frequently also his name has come up in connection with mominations for professorships. His suc-cessful pastorate added to what is already written show his many claims which wil one day elevate him to the chair. Rev. Dr. Milligan, of Toronto, proved to be the man of the hour, as was anticipated. His is a most popular name. His ministry in his own city has become unique in the popularity which he has directed to expository preaching, drawing to his church a very large body of the students in all branches of study. The sensationalist has not more popular crowds than the one day elevate him to the chair. Rev.

Plenty of Lobsters.

A St. Martins man said yesterday that never in the history of the lobster industry had the fishermen in that section had better success. This, they attributed to the regulation raising the legal size of lobsters to 10½ inches. Men secured from dobsters to 10½ inches. Men secured from 160 to 180 lobsters a day, and these sold there at ten cents each. One man had taken between 3,000 and 4,000. They had actually to close their traps for a time.

In view of the large catch, The Telegraph's informant said that the fishermen would be willing to raise the limit to 11½ or even 12 inches, if they were permitted to fish at any time during the year. They were convinced that raising the legal limit of length had produced the excellent results of this season. the only way to have a constant supply of rich, red health-giving blood is to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.
