Duchess and their little family.

The many friends and admirers of Dr. Punshon, both within and without the Methodist Church in Canada, will be glad to learn that at the earliest possible period after his return to England he has been made President of the English Confersence. Dr. P.'s eminent fitness for such a position will be recognized on all hands. He is not merely an eloquent orator, but at an excellent man of business, as familiar with schedules and statistics as with semonizing and speech-making, and as able to deal efficiently with the former as he is universally acknowledged to do with the latter.

Concerning the winter bonnets, a Paris correspondent writes that the shapes remain pretty much; as they were last Spring, though a more decided attempt is to be made during the coming season in the latter.

As if to render half the feminine fashionables madly envious of the other half, fashion has just presented the daintiest thing imaginable in buttons. They are made of the exquisite lining of conch shell. Can you fancy anything more perfect? On a gown they look as if the wearer had pluned an over-ripe rose at her throat, and the petals had gradually detached themselves and floated carelessly down the front of the dress. No happier idea for delicate summer fabrics could be conceived. And the reason that half the sex will be envious of the other is that the faint pink finting of the buttons will be becoming only to certain pale and extremely clear complexions. No thick skinned bruneties, no red-haired blondes, no half-and-half colorings can bear the test of the conch-shell buttous; but the fortunate few who can wear them will relieve realizable.

sons had certain secrets that could not be revealed to her, jealous of all secret assemblings, sent an armed force to break up their annual Grand Lodge at York, on St. John's Day, 1561. Signature, instead of being dismayed at such an unexpected visit, gallanty told the officer than nothing could give him greater pleasure than seeing them in the Grand Lodge, as it would give him an opportunity of convincing them that Freemasonry was a system founded on divine and moral laws. The consequence of his arguments was, that he made them Freemasons, and they, on their return, reported to the Queen the result of their commission, and she never more attempted to dislodge or disturb them, but held them in much esteem as a peculiar sect of men that cultivated peace and friendship, the arts and sciences, without meddling in the affairs of Church and State.
