

HINTS FOR THE WORKING —OF THE— General and Local Associations

1. In forming an Association the chief thing to guard against is its remaining one simply on paper. To avoid this the greatest care should be taken to select good officers. Only active and energetic men should be chosen. Filling the office with mere figureheads destroys the efficiency of many Associations. It does not, by any means, follow, merely because a man is popular, a good fellow, and a zealous Conservative, that he will make a good President or Vice President. While such men are useful, they should not be selected unless they are also men of active business habits, with strong wills, and will insist upon the work being done.

2. Each local President shall see that the chairman and their committees in his municipality are provided with lists of voters in pass-book.

3. The chairman and their committees are to work up their respective divisions thoroughly.

HINTS FOR OFFICERS AND OTHERS

4. The local Presidents should be very particular in requiring reports from the chairman of the divisions, as that will be found to result in the more careful performance of the work in such divisions.

5. In canvassing persons to join the Association
