A Cure for Egg-eating Hens

A first-rate plan, and one that has A first-rate plan, and one that has been proven a success in curing hens of the bad habit of eating their eggs, is given here. It is simple, and easy to prepare, and is a sure preventive. Secure a box, in which there are no open cracks between boards, preferably one of matched lumber, such the earn be obtained at a drygoods store. The size should be about 94 x 36 inches, and 18 inches high. Take the top cff, and in one end of the 36 inch side, cut a doorway, as shown in illustration, about 10 x 12.

There is very likely a slight draft near the roots, and the chickens have caught cold. As they are in good health, they will perhaps throw hatched 109 healthy chicks out of a off the cold before it goes farther, if possible 124. The chicks were as the part farthest from the inner door, and leave the rest of the box without any.

Now, nail on a tight cover, except enough for a door, above the nest, for convenience in taking out eggs, taking care to make the inner compartment as dark as possible. When complete, the hon goes in through the outer door in the partition, and must then turn to the lett to reach the nest. She will gladly go to such a nest, but the egg on the partition, and must then turn to the lett to reach the nest. She will gladly go to such a nest, but the egg for you, as she ought.

I Will Equip You To Raise Poultry Without Your Putting Up One Cent

Tell me who you are, and I | will make you the squarest incubator-and-brooder proposition you ever heard in your life.

I will ship you a Peerless Incubator, and a Peerless Brooder (or either — but you need both), and give you a ten years' GUARANTEE in writing that they will work right.

My Peerless Incubator, and its running-mate the Peerless Brooder, will give you the right start in the poultry business. Nothing else will. Nothing else will, because no other incubator or brooder is heated right, ventilated right and sold right. No other incubator, no other brooder, is GUARANTEED as I guarantee the Peerless.

I take all the guess-work, all the worry, out of poultry-rais-ing with the Peerless outfit. I will give you two years' time to pay for the outfit if you want me to.

I will tell you exactly what to make a go of poultry-raising.

If you want me to, I'll undertake to get you topnotch prices for all the poultry you want to sell. I won't sell it for you, but I'll find you a direct buyer for it, at any time of year-a buyer who can't get enough poultry or eggs, and who pays high prices and pays spot cash down.

I will see you through—that's it. I'll outfit you at my own risk; I'll guarantee you satisfaction with what you buy from me; I will find you a good market for your product.

You supply just plain gump-tion—that, with this outfit and my co-operation with you, will add you to the long list of people who are making more money out of poultry than they can make at anything elseand making it easier.

Now, never sounds too good to be true. You can't risk anything by hearing the whole story. That I will tell
