, June 15, 1901

could pin their institution or bind ation to a graveNew York the forsillusioned me. I he home of a body is men. It was ononversations with only at a fool's paraup in. I now see world possesses of rilization is due Catholic Church best exponent of cough the centurme with wondercestants, who vacures, are entirely tholic Church for to say, when I is to time in res of my early we intelligent and in the contractions of the contract

w intelligent con-conversion has conversion has same way. Travel al, and there is no pating prejudices hought with men ther environment as different from summer hotels stant non-Catho-is no thought stant non-Cathois no thought the people than gion. It is one's a life. So little resion that passes religion has a ongly have these the possibility the possibility sion work being mmer watering tealous Catholic bout to start a His purpose is toolic to put a lof Catholic all of Catholic olic to put a al of Catholic n Facts," into as off on his van not to neglect n it presents it an explanation to endeavor to the summer rejectures for non-

about the wil-of non-Catholics of non-Catholics curious to know of the Catholic hile they might plic Church in fear of being they are away traints they will with a much with a much how much good nder just such

COMED HOME

P.P. Douglas, t in California onths, for the returned home th, and was by his devoted s return, in

arge congrega John Mc-

r. John Mc trick M. Con-ather Marion of gold vest-purse, on ben, P.P., "St.

s.

pr,—When, afthful service forced through orarily relinors of the parof climate for our shattered f this congre-eved, and earn-ed for your eatly pleased rn to us with trength; and the thank Al-as also guard-rom the perils long and fa-joy and pleas-resent auspi-r you a most come; and as will celebrate ry of your offer you our lations, and set of gold accompanying a of our love hout publicly debtness to or his many the faithful in which he e parish dur-ong spared to d works you in our midst. our fervent for your fu-ess, we are ers. he parish, EN. ONWAY,

ER, ERTY, REEN,

Ir'. RIGHT. celingly re-their kind-l expressing

e. DOYLE, tholic Mission-

BY OUR CURBSTONE OBSERVED

the facts are there: "cold, hard facts," s Dickens calls them. The Catholic paper has always an uphill road to travel. And, if there are a few exceptions, they merely substantiate the rule that obtains. I have had ample opportunity of observing the trend and the working of Catholic journalism, both in Canada and in the neighboring Republic, and I have failed, so far, to meet with a single example of unqualified success. Why is it so? This question has been asked me by scores of people, all of whom are interested in having good and prosperous Catho-lic journals, and all of whom are, having good and prospersors lic journals, and all of whom are, themselves, unintentionally the causes of much of that material failure. They lament a condition that they have it in their power to ameliorate, yet they never dream of taking the first necessary step in that direction.

to my mind on reading a very strik able work "The Three Fates." deals with the Pen-Worker and his difficulties: and while its application is general, still, to my mind, it fits the Catholic journalist to perfection. I say this because the truly conscientious Catholic writer is fearfully handicapped in life's struggle for existence. He is obliged to forego opportunities that others may take advantage of without any scruples. The Catholic field of journalism is exceedingly limited, and it is not only poor, but many barren patches are found upon its surface. Secular and even Protestant journalism is a forbidden field for him. He may enter upon it if he wishes, and may find therein a means of livelihood, but he is thereby obliged to sacrifice principle at the shrine of necessity. If he does so he is condemned in no measured degree; if he does not do so, he is left the reward of his own conscience, but no other compensation in this world. He may starve for aught any one seems to care, but he must not sacrifice his principles for the sake of gaining a livelihood that his own cannot afford him. I say this because the truly conlivelihood that his own cannot afford him.

I will reproduce the entire paragraph from Crawford's pages, and its truth and exactness cannot fail to impress the reflecting reader. It is thus the novelist writes :-

"Among the many consequences of entering upon a literary life is the losing forever of the feeling that any moment there is nothing to be done. Let a writer work until his brain reels and his fingers can no longer hold the pen. he will, nevertheless, find it impossible to rest without imagining that he is being idle. He cannot escape from the devil that drives him, because he is himself the driver and the driven, the fiend and his victim, the torturer and the tortured. Let physicians rail at the horrible consequences of drink, of excessive smoking, of opium, of chloral and of morphine—the most terrible of all stimulants is ink, the hardest "Among the many consequences of

I have frequently observed that there is no more ungrateful avocation than that of Catholic journalism. Why it should be so, is more than I dare venture to surmise. Yet, the facts are there: "cold, hard facts," s Dickens calls them. The Catholic paper has always an uphill road to travel. And, if there are a few exceptions, they merely substantiate the rule that obtains. I have had ample opportunity of observing the trend and the working of Catholic journalism, both in Canada and in the neighboring Republic, and I have failed, so far, to meet with a single example of unqualified success. Why is it so? This question has been asked me by scores of people, all of whom are interested in having good and prosperous Catholic journals, and all of whom are, themselves. unintentionally the lauses of rauch of that material failure. They lament a condition that hey have it in their power to amejorate, yet they never dream of taking the first necessary step in that irrection.

This question was brought forcibly on my mind on reading a very striking passage in Marion Crawford's ble work "The Three Fates." It cals with the Pen-Worker and his ifficulties; and while its application general, still, to my mind, it fits accatholic journalist to perfection.

Permit me an old saying- "there Fermit me an old saying—"there is more truth than poetry" in this. Is there no way in which this sad fate of the man who devotes all he possesses of talents, time, and energy to the cause of his fellowmen, can be averted? As far as we Catholics are concerned, there is only one way: it is to seriously encourarge the Catholic press. I am fully aware that appeals in this direction are almost useless, for they have ever been that appeals in this direction are almost useless, for they have ever been more or less fruitless. Yet, it becomes a duty, at times, to touch upon the subject and to bring it out in different lights in order to attempt the awakening of very good-intentioned people from the apathy which seems to have fallen upon them.

What impresses me the most in this matter is the lack of feeling, or pride, or whatever I may call it that seems to have fallen upon our co-religionists. We would be indignant if we were accused of inhospitality, of indifference to our church, of slothfulness in matters of religion, of incompetency in competing either commercially, industrially, politically or otherwise with the other claments of the community. Yet, we either commercially, industrially, po-litically or otherwise with the other elements of the community. Yet, we witness day in and day out the evi-dences of our inferiority in matters concerning the journalism of the hour, and we calmly move along as if the affair was no concern of ours. We are not ashumed to estawaledge. elements of the community. Yet, we witness day in and day out the evidences of our inferiority in matters concerning the journalism of the hour, and we calmly move along as if the affair was no concern of ours. We are not ashamed to acknowledge the lack of support from which our Catholic papers suffer; yet we 'demand that our journalists should fight our battles when all others are against us. We permit our Catholic pen-workers to drift into misery, before our eyes, yet we would boil over with indignation if any of our neighbors declined to subscribe for a monument to the memory of some one whose death was due to the starwards the sternal upon this judgment seat, and these two souls standing there; side by side, in the awful silence of the Infinite. Were I to live a hundred years I could never forget that moment. It was eloquence reaching the very apex of the sublime. And, at that moment, when we expected a prolonged description of the judgment scene, the speaker paused, became silent, looked around for a moment, bowed and resumed his seat. He left to our imaginations the compliment to his audience which was fully appreciated.

In the course of my life I have had occasion to see and to hear some famous men; several of these have not only passed away from earth, but out of the recollections of the great public. I call them famous, because they had all attained certain degrees of renown in their own day. It occurred to me the other evening that possibly a number of the readers of the "True Witness" would be interested in a few brief reminiscences of personages whom they, too, may have met, or heard speak, Any way i have dotted down some of these personal recollections, and, if the paper's management does not care to fling them in the waste peper basket, they may see the light of day through its columns.

THE REV. DR. ROGERS.— It is very probable that not one of all my readers will recall Dr. Rogers: if any still live who chanced to have heard him, it is very likely that they, have, in the rush of life, long since forgotten him. In 1874-75 I was in the class of Belles-Lettres in one of the leading colleges of this country. One evening in midwinter a rare and exceptional treat was afforded us. It was announced that a Rev. Ir. Rogers was to lecture, in the city theatre, on "Life Here and Hereafter;" the students in the classes of Belles-Lettres, Rhetoric and Philosophy were granted permission to stited the lecture. I subsequently learned that this permission to stited the lecture. I subsequently learned that this permission to stited the lecture. I subsequently learned that this permission to stited the lecture. I subsequently learned that this permission.

hurried statement of his conversion. Without gesture, or apparent unimation, he spoke for fully fifteen minutes. Yet every eye was riveted upon him, and every breath was held. It was his voice that worked this miracle upon the audience. Such a voice I had never before heard; it was like some delicately tuned instrument that the performer could use at will, up and down the gamut of sounds and intonations he glided with an ease that was most astounding. His lowest, softest whisper could be distinctly heard in the remotest corner of the thronged theatre; and his louder tones never shocked the nerves, nor left, an unpleasant impression.

But when he had glided into the subject of his feature, when his features became animated with the glow of enthusiasm, when his grey eyes flashed rays of penetrating eloquence, when his gestures became more active, when he unbuttoned his long coat, threw back his hair, and stirred a few steps nearer to the footlights, the transformation was electric in its effect. No longer did the same man seem to occupy the platform; another being, a robed angel with a celestial clarion, appeared to have descended amongst us to proclaim some glorious message. Can I ever forget that hour and a half!

What did he say? I do not know, I cannot remember. Had I been a stenographer and commissioned to report his lecture, I could never have performed the task. It was not the man, it was the soul that seemed to permeate the whole of that vast audience. At will he carried us along with him, from scene to scene of the mental panorama that he unrolled before us: there was no resistance possible, no distraction, no inattention, no criticism, no calculation. It was a mighty river sweeping seawas a mighty river sweeping ward and bearing away, despite all efforts to the contrary, the frail vessels that danced upon its bosom.

At the close, or as he approached that which represented a peroration, he drew a picture of a battle — it might have been Waterloo, or Balaclava, or Fair Oaks, or Chatanooga. or any other modern battle—so vividly, so realistically that we could almost, hear the boom of the cannon, the clash of the sabres, the champing of the horses, the rush of cavalry, the moans of the wounded, the yells of conflict, the cheers of victory. And, in the midst of that word-painting, we saw an officer. At the close, or as he approached victory. And, in the midst of that word-painting, we saw an officer, leading on to a charge, and a Sister of Charity, kneeling beside a dying soldier, we heard a terrific volley: the officer and the nun were both killed at the same instant — that volley had swept the whole face of the field.

There was a pause: a pause of the most intense excitement. The lecturer seemed to be taking breath before attempting another eagle-flight into the realms of the imagination. The two were killed; the officer in the moment of glory's triumph, the num in the moment of mercy's last effort. He then followed the two souls in the moment of mercy's last effort. He then followed the two souls to the throne of God. The scene to the throne of God. The scen-changed. He pictured the Eternal up drives him, because he is himself the driven, the fend and his victim, the torturer and the driven, the fend and his victim, the torturer and the tortured. Let physicians rail at the horshild consequences of drink, of excessive smoking, of opium, of chloral and of morphine—the most terrible consequences of drink, of excessive smoking, of opium, of chloral and of morphine—the most terrible to his audience which was fully appreciated.

There was no applause. The alience had been spell-bound; no one seemed to realize that the man had soft taskmasters, the most fascination of the most as a coulsn' of President Van Buren. The subject of our sketch was only when the chairman arose to propose a vote of the sweetest foreams and of the most as instituted a would be insignificant individually to altimize the most institute and the control of the most instituted and proposed and proposed

Who was Dr. Rogers? What became of him? Is he still in the land of the living? Did he ever since repeat for others that lecture? None of these questions can I answer. His form, his appearance, his oratory. constitute for me a mere memory—but one of those rare and charming recollections which mark, like stars of extra magnitude, the confused brilliancy of that galaxy which hangs in the sky of each man's past life.

FAMOUS YACHT BUILDERS.

The fame of the Defender and Columbia has fallen, curiously enough, upon an entire family. A few yachtsmen and the people of Bristol know the Herreshoffs man from man; the numerous inlander knows only "the Herreshoffs," a dim aggregation of genius that designs and builds extraordinary sailing craft. There are nine of the Herreshoffs, seven brothers and two sisters, now nearly all men and women well along in years. Four of them are blind—a curious malady which has attacked this family of genius without seemingly impairing its power of achievement. Only two of the brothers are connected with the yacht-building establishment. John B. Herreshoff, the president of the company, though blind from his boygood, has built up and managed the business which has made the name famous—even concerning himself with the intimate details of construction and finance. Captain "Nat"—Nathanici Green Herveshord—is the other member of the Grana, the other member of the Grana and them to victory. These two med a name in a single generation—they did not inherit their reputation.

They came rightfully by their love of the Grana and them to victory. These two med a name in a single generation—they did not inherit their reputation.

They came rightfully by their love of the Grana and the other, and he beat all comers with the sailed her twenty-one miles an hour over a measured courte. At another, and he beat all comers with the r. It is recorded that he not offer of the met the Sound steamer at Newport, and beat her into Proyed of Grana and the other of the State of Bristol as having been a tall, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the other of the sole of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all, so the of Bristol as having been at all so the order of the sole of Bristol as having been at all so the order of the sole of Bristol as having been at all so the the right he can see the old ho stead which his father built and in which he grew to manhood. He has a family of six children—five boys and one girl—all of whom take to the sea with happily less enthusiasm than their father. Indeed, Mrs. Herreshoff comes from the ancient Bristol family of De Wolfs, of whom Captain "Jim" De Wolf built the famous privateer Yankee in 1812.

MADAME TEN BROECK

It is appropriate to give now, in June, a brief sketch of Madame Ten Broeck, a member of the Society of the Sacred Heart. Madame Ten Broeck's ancestors were among the first settlers in New York State. Her father was John Rensselaer Ten Broeck and her mother Elizabeth.

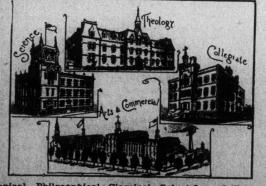

the scientific, insight and the mathematical accuracy of a Herreshoff to produce a racing machine such as the Defender or the Columbia.

Captain Nat has built his home even nearer to the sea than did his father. High tide in the harbor reaches within fifteen yards of his front doorway. It is a big, roomy, yellow house with the models of yachts showing in its upper windows. From his front door he can look across the beautiful harbor of Bristol; he can see, scarcely a hundred yards away, the big twin sheds which have been the cradle of so many famous yachts, and further to many famous yachts, and further to stead which his father built and in

.....GO TO.....

SADLIER'S

Handsomely bound Prayer Books. Neatly mounted Prayer Beads. Crucifixes in Metal, Pearl, Ivory, etc. Religious Pictures, small and large Medals in Gold and Silver.

Theological, Philosophical, Classical, Scientific and Commercial Courses. Fully Equipped Laboratories. A Practical Business Department.

BOARD AND TUITION, per Session of Five Months, $50. Calendar senson application.

THOMAS LIGGET

Our new work rooms are now in full running order. Carpet making and laying, removal of carpets, car pet beating, making over and re-laying in all its branches a specialty.

A large and competent staff and sewers to ensure prompt attention to all orders. Note the address.

THOMAS LIGGET, Empire Bldg., 2274-2276 St. Catherine St. OXTY TIGHERT OFFICER,

 NINETEENTH Annual Irish Catholic PILGRIMAGE To Ste. Anne de Beaupre and Cap de la Madeleine, Under direction of Redemptorist Fathers of St. Ann's Church, Montreal,

FOR LADIES AND CHILDREN ONLY,

SATURDAY, June 22nd, 1901. The Steamer "THREE RIVERS" leaves Bonsecours Wharf at 2.30 1.M.

TICKETS-Adults $2.10, Children $1.05.
Tickets and Staterooms can be scoured at St. Ann's Presbytery, 32 Basin, treet

N B.-Pilgrimege to Ste. Anne de Beaupre, for Men, by Str. "Three Rivers," Saturday, July 27th, at 6.30 P.M.

Montreal City and District

Savings Bank.

Montreal, 29th May, 1901.

Be Sure to Order ROWAN'S

Belfant Ginger Ale. Soda Water, Apple Nectar, Kela, Cream Soda, etc. Note our Trade Mark, the "Sham-rock," on every bottle, Ag-nta and Bottlers of the "Beaver Brand" Catedonic Wester.

ROWAN BROS. & CO.,

Phone, Main 718. 22; Vallee Street

CARTER'S In Cold Cure IUL.

CURES IN A DAY.

P. McCORMACK & CO.. Agents,
Cor. Prince Arthurst, and Park Av

W. GEO. KENNEDY,

...Dentist ...

No. 758 PALACE STREET

Two Doors West of Beaver

Hall Hill.

attend school, she was placed in the "Hudson Academy." Here her attention was directed toward the Church by hearing a man, who claimed to have once been a Catholic, talking against the Church. The young girl thought, as she listened to the speaker, "I wonder if this is all true. Are the Catholics as black as he paints them?"

Notice is hereby given that a Dividend of Eight Dollars per Share on the Capital Stock of this institution has been declared, and the same will be payable at its banking house in this city on and after TUESDAY, the 2nd Day of July next.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th to the 30th of June next, both days inclusive.

By order of the Board,

HY. BARBEAU,

Manager.

of God. When she was not in the school-room teaching, she gave many hours at her desk writing charming books for both young and old. Her magazine articles as, also, her books, were signed "E. V. N."

She died at the convent of the Sacred Heart, Eden Hall, Pa., on March 19, 1901. Thus passed away a soul ripe for the Kingdon of Heaven, one who needed but to know a duty and her plassing was as a soul ripe for the Kingdon of duty and her plassing was the same was a soul ripe for the Kingdon of Heaven.

a sour ripe for the Kingdon of Heav-en, one who needed but to know a duty and her pleasure was to do it. —From Messenger of the Sacred Heart for May, the article "A Hid-den Toiler."

Religion is the fear of God; its de monstration is good works, and faith is the root of both.

FIRST COMMUNION

READY-TO-WEAR GARMENTS

For Summer Use. A practically unlimited range of choice in all the latest styles, at popular prices, will be found in our Ready-to-Wear Dept.!

JUST RECEIVED.— A beautiful lot of American Lawn Blouses, in all the latest designs, prices from $1.00 to $7.50. CRASH SKIRTS.-A very serviceable assortment at exceptionally low prices! Prices from $1.00.

PIQUE SKIRTS., Nicely made, to $4.50.

PARISIAN COLORED DRESSES in Muslin, Sateen, etc., latest styles, beautifully trimmed with Valenciennes Lace. See our window!

SUMMER CORSETS, in all the ading styles, from 50c.

BOYS' SUMMER BLOUSES, well made, from the best materials, from 50c. CHILDREN'S SUMMER DRESSES in leading designs, from 50c CHILDREN'S WHITE CASHMERE COATS AND REEFERS, trimmed with embroidery and satin ribbon, beautifully finished, from $2.25 Country orders carefully filled.

Butterick's Patterns and Publications.

JOHN MURPHY & CO.

22 4281, fatherine Street, corner of Metcalfe Street.

TERMS CASH. Telephone Up 933.

GRAND TRUNK The INTERNATIONAL LIMITED Leaves Montreal daily at 9 a m . reaching To-ronto at 4 40 s m . Hamilton 6.40 p m . London 7 30 p m . Detroit 9 40 p m (Central time), and Obleage at 7 20 following morning. A Cafe Parlor Car is attached to this train, serving luncheon a la carte at any hour during the day convenient to passengers.

PAST SERVICE Setween MOVTREAL
Tast trains leave Montreal daily, escept Sunday, at 91 5a m and 410 pm, arriving at Ottawa
11.35 a m, and 6 35 pm.
12.15 a m, and 6 35 pm.
13.15 a m, and 6 35 pm.
14.15 a m, and 6 35 pm.
15.15 a m, and 6 35 pm.
15.15

Picturesque Pan-American Route to Buffalo