

USEFUL INFORMATION.

Directions for making bread with Ogilvie's flour.—To one quart of milk or water add two-thirds of a teacupful of yeast or one cake of compressed yeast, add flour to the thickness of batter, and let it rise over night; then add flour enough to knead softly twenty minutes, as it requires more kneading than softer ground flour or flour made from winter wheat. Let it rise in the pan, then make into small loaves, and let it rise again. Bake in a moderate oven.

We insist on proper temperature of the room; the dough must not get chilled.

Important.—This flour, being made from the best selected Manitoba Red Fyfe wheat, requires more water and more kneading than soft wheat flours. Water is plentiful and cheap, and for the extra time spent in kneading our flour you are more than paid.

First.—The improved quality of the bread.

Second.—The largely increased amount of bread obtained.

Third.—The longer time this bread will keep moist and palatable.

Remember this flour is milled for strength, which means money to you in the increased number of loaves of bread per bag you get.

Don't let your grocer or flour dealer foist upon you some other grade of flour by telling you it is just as good. Cheaper grades of flour are sold at a lower price, and he makes more money out of these cheap flours than out of Ogilvie's. Insist on getting Ogilvie's.

It is generally recognized that the time has arrived when, if the beaver is not to be exterminated steps must be taken to prevent his further slaughter. He has, like the buffalo, been driven far away from the outposts of civilization and, as Mr. Horace Martin has pointed out in his recent work, unless he be protected will soon be no more. The beaver has been a most important factor in the history of this North American continent. Not only has he supplied food and clothing for the settlers, but his skin has served the purposes of currency. The latest view regarding him is that fur dealers complain of the increasing scarcity of skins, while in the absence of a protecting law, whole colonies are slaughtered, kittens and all.
