“LANG MAY YER LUM REEK”

For the benefit of any of our readers who do not have the good fortune to be Scotch it may be necessary to give the English of this wish, which is accorded us by one of our readers and advertisers. It is “Lang may your chimney smoke,” but plain English does not conjure up in the mind’s eye the picture of content and happiness which the Scotch suggests—the comfortable fireside sending its wreath of blue smoke up the chimney, eloquent evidence that the home fires are burning.

The senders of this wish, which we would like to re-echo to all our readers and advertisers, are Messrs. Mowbray Bros., who write us about the results received from their classified ad. in The Guide:

We have had splendid results from all ads. in The Guide. Our last one brought us $100 worth of business and only cost us $3.00. “Lang may yer lum reek.”

Cartwright, Man., Feb. 2, 1918.
