

MOUNDS OF DEAD AND WOUNDED

Battlefield of Fierce Fight Was Covered with Bodies of Slain.

Behind the French Army on the Somme, Sept. 22.—The heaviest sacrifice of life since the early days of the Verdun battle marked the vain German counter-attack yesterday against the new French positions north of the Somme.

The German effort to stem the French advance was the strongest made since the beginning of the Somme battle. It lasted over ten hours, and was made by six divisions, which suffered terrific losses under the French barrier fire.

The German effort to stem the French advance was the strongest made since the beginning of the Somme battle. It lasted over ten hours, and was made by six divisions, which suffered terrific losses under the French barrier fire.

The last attack, delivered at dusk, was terminated by a series of checks which cost the Germans a whole regiment and a Bavarian company, belonging to the Eleventh Regiment, lost 160 out of 200 men.

Directed by von Hindenburg, the attack was personally led by Field Marshal von Hindenburg.

Made Germany Change Plans The allied menace to Comblès and Peronne has dictated during the week past some important and unexpected changes in the plans of the German Great General Staff.

The capture of Bouchevaines, half way between the two vital Teuton bases on the Somme, the subsequent severance of communication between them, and the partial envelopment of Comblès forced Field Marshal von Hindenburg to despatch great forces of additional troops to the Somme front to wrest back Bouchevaines, cost what it may.

Moreover, these allied successes threw a spoke in the wheels of the German "steam roller," which evidently was scheduled to be set in motion against the Russians on the Riga front.

Such are the conclusions inevitably forced by the announcement contained in the French official midnight communiqué.

Wedding Bells

A very interesting event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Chamberlain, 241 Brant Avenue, when their only daughter, Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. Alex. Yule of the Bank of British North America. Promptly at 3.30 the bride, beamingly attired in shell pink silk and chiffon with lace trimmings and carrying a shower bouquet of roses and heather, entered the parlor, leaning on the arm of her father, where the knot was securely tied by the Rev. W. H. Wrighton; the service being very impressive. During the ceremony Mrs. P. Miller of St. Catharines, cousin of the bride, played Lohengrin's bridal chorus. After the service, a very dainty luncheon was served, the dining room being prettily decorated in pink and white. The many beautiful presents showed the high esteem in which the young couple are held, several substantial cheques from friends in and out of the city being among the costly presents. The guests were the immediate relations and friends of the contracting parties. The young couple left on the 6.05 train for Toronto and Muskoka; the bride travelled in a grey tailored suit, with black velvet hat and ermine fur. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Yule will reside at Chisholmville. Mr. Yule has charge of the B.N.A. branch there.

YE COMPLEAT SPY; OR THE GENTLE ART OF ESPIONAGE

Exceedingly Interesting German Publication Contains Compendium of Advice to Hun Secret Agents

A remarkable and illuminating "secret document" issued by the German Intelligence Department, and containing "instructions for German spies" is published in the South African Review of Capetown.

The following is a translation of the instructions issued to the leaders of the army of between twelve and twenty thousand German spies who worked for "The Day." These instructions were communicated to each head "section"—the local German Consulate. In Capetown Baron von Humboldt had these directions:

1. It is necessary for every officer who aspires to intelligence employment to be possessed of these qualities: keen observation, a good memory, accuracy, patience, determination, and, above all, secretiveness.

2. The necessity for thoroughly sifting information where engaged upon a peace reconnaissance (spying in peace time in a foreign country) calls for infinite patience. The slightest display of anxiety or undue interest may arouse suspicions that may foil the inquirer's object and seriously interfere with future intelligence work in the same country.

3. Secretiveness and caution are essential qualities for an intelligence officer employed abroad. An oath is to be extracted from a married officer employed on foreign intelligence work that he will not divulge any information regarding his movements and doings in a foreign country even to his wife.

4. Diaries, letters and bills should never be left about. A waste-paper basket, as the Dreyfus case proves, is a deadly snare, however small the morsels that are cast into it. Memoranda for one's own use, when it is indispensable to put complicated information in writing, should be written in a style and language that a stranger could not understand the meaning of. It is astonishing how careful of diaries. II.—The officer who has prepared himself by an exhaustive course of technical study cannot fail to acquire himself in intelligence work which is more fruitful of distinction than most of the duties of his profession.

III.—A knowledge of languages is not of absolute importance to an intelligence officer, but if two men otherwise suitable are working in a neighboring country, the one who knows the language of that country has an immeasurable advantage over the other. Yet if the knowledge of the language is a powerful weapon, the concealment of such knowledge renders it more formidable still.

IV.—When expecting information from an informer, whether soldier, sailor, or civil individual, it is sometimes advisable to bring him on a night journey to the appointed rendezvous. When tired out or hungry such a person will be more communicative than one whose creature comforts have been attended to; for this reason the examination should be begun with the least possible delay. As a consequence, the interrogator obtains additional control over his agent by holding out the promise of early and liberal treatment for full and frank information.

V.—Valuable information may often be obtained by volunteering certain news oneself in the course of a conversation, and following it up with a well-timed conversation. It is generally better to ascertain half a dozen facts than to elicit a hundred opinions. A stupid informer's opinion is of no value, and a clever one's will probably not disclose his own views. On the other hand, a multitude of facts, even though half of them may be apparently at the time of reference a military or naval officer. They may be regarded as incommunicable. But if the officer has to be on guard against undue credulity he should likewise beware of hasty generalization. It is the unexpected, in the preparation for war, that always happens. The intelligence officers in a foreign country must ever be on the alert for an unexpected stroke of genius of a potential enemy.
