Hammocks.

By H. L. HANN.

The hammock is an uneasy imitation of a folding bed in which a man can sleep with perfect comfort if he does not object to being doubled up in the form of a horse-shoe. Hammocks have become quite popular as a porch ornament and as such are very effective, especially when occupied by somebody who is trying to make love with his back-bone tied in a bowknot.

The hammock is a Spanish invention. The Spanish people do not believe in overwork and have to have some place where they can rest about ten hours a day without being stabbed by the native tarantula. Travellers who have been in Spain say it is a pleasing sight to see a lissom-limbed member of the nobility taking a tenuous siesta in a hammock, with both knees tucked securely under his lower lip and his mouth slightly ajar.

Hammocks are always taken on a picnic in order to provide a harmless form of exercise for people who do not care to sit on the ground and contract a cold in the head. For some inscrutable reason, no two people of the same height and weight every attempt to sit down in a hammock at the same time. The minute that a stout, healthy woman plants 100 pounds of gazelle-like exuberance in a hammock, some playful suitor who averages 88 pounds in his winter overcoat moves in beside her and is immediately caught in the rebound and tossed into a sumac bush. If his companion arises to hunt a third helping of white meat and then sits down in one heap, the hammock will give way in the middle and jar his excess breath out of circulation.

Hammocks are made of a cheap quality of binder twine which is continually breaking in some unexpected spot and causing the occupant to fall through on his elbow. Some hammocks are constructed of a slippery brand of canvas, which is harder to stay on without spikes than the water wagon. Sailors sleep in hammocks in order to avoid making the beds and changing the pillow shams.

Hammocks are productive of numerous casualties, such as strained ligaments, engagements, etc., but they hold no terrors for love's young dream.

Received Painful Injury

Saturday forenoon, a young chap named Ellis, an apprentice in the Reid Nfld. Co's locomotive works, while engaged repairing a tender of one of the engines, in jumping down from the position he occupied on a slipper and fell on the handle of a hammer which was upright on the floor. He received the blow in the lower part of the stomach and the breath was knocked out of him. He received some bad bruises and was painfully hurt. After being brought into the office near he revived after a while and was driven to his home where he was treated by a doctor.

The Fogota Here.

She had it fine on the run north but returning she had it very stormy with a southerly gale, fog, rain and heavy sea especially on Saturday. She brought about 20 passengers.

Nurse Marries Patient Who Gave Skin to Injured Boy.

New York, June 16.—Charles Kaplow, 22 years old, a patient in Gouverneur Hospital, where he is suffering from a wound on his thigh, got up from his bed long enough yesterday to be married to Miss Feulah Bowers, a nurse in the hospital. Kaplow some time ago contributed some of his skin so that a wound on the back of William Colwell of Nutley might be healed. He received many letters commending him for his bravery, among them one from Miss Powders. When he entered the hospital he had no idea that the young woman was employed there as a nurse. They were married at the headquarters of the Salvation Army in West Fourth Street.

The Kyle Back.

Here and There

The s.s. Kyle, Capt. Parsons, arrived here at 6.30 a.m. yesterday from Labrador, and went north as far as Double Islands, doing the round trip in little over 9 days. The ship did not meet much ice on the way north but near Battle Harbor and in the Straits she met considerable on the way south while away in the Northern Labrador there was a heavy "jam" of ice as far as the eye could see. Capt. Parsons thinks the off shore wharf since he was there cleared the coast. Icebergs are numerous "right along the coast and with such a big fleet of schooners going north" are "dangerous" customers, especially in foggy wet weather. Capt. Parsons struck in along the coast south to Battle Harbor, and there is a sign of codfish. All are hopeful of a good fishery. The ship brought few passengers.

Obituary.

R. D. McRAE.

It is with sincere regret we record the demise of Mr. R. D. McRae, principal of the firm of R. D. McRae & Sons, Harbour Grace, and a gentleman well-known and highly respected all over the island. The deceased was a native of Bouliardic, Cape Breton, was in his 67th year, and succumbed to a comparatively brief illness. He was extremely popular all over Conception Bay and particularly so in Harbour Grace. He carried on large fishery operations on Labrador.

Cautioned by Wireless.

On her way here the Carthaginian was in communication by wireless in mid-ocean with the R. M. S. Mongolian which was en route to Glasgow from this port. The latter ship advised to beware of ice menaces as she had passed a couple of large bergs surrounded by numerous "growlers."

Another Letter F

Editor Evening Telegram.

Sir,—In my letter of Monday last I promised to give an account of what is being done elsewhere under Government by Commission. I do not wish to convey the idea that such a system is a panacea for all the evils that affect our city. We will have to go deeper than the Municipal Council right down into our industrial system before we will be able to right the many evils that grow out of its anarchic uses. With its unregulated competition, uncontrolled combinations and monopolies, low wages and scarcity of constant employment, many workers thus producing the great evil of poverty it will not be possible to eradicate that evil which is largely responsible for much of the wretched conditions of the city. Poverty I do not mean lack of bread, molasses and salt pork and a place to live in and a pair to use, but that poverty which means lack of means to provide good nourishment and wholesome food for the body and the sanitary conveniences necessary as a home for the maintenance of cleanliness and health. If we agree to make the change necessary in our industrial system we can save a top off some of the branches of our city government.

I am well aware that in giving a review of what has been done successfully elsewhere by cities under the Government by Commission, that will be those who will contend that what may be good for cities in the United States may be of no advantage to a city like ours. That to adopt the initiative, Referendum, Right of Recall and place the city officers directly under control of the electorate would be a dangerous experiment, especially with a people whose education is so limited that any demagogue may lead them into excesses unthinkable. Anticipating this argument, I have taken the city of Haverhill, Mass., as a city in New England to show the Commission Government. Here a city of 40,000 inhabitants whose dominant industry is the manufacture of boots and shoes. The majority of
