Wounded British Officer

REFUSED TO BE MOVED UNTIL HIS INJURED MEN WERE FIRST TAKEN AWAY.

(London Mail.)
A Sergeant-Major of the 2nd Royal Fusiliers writes home from the front:
The battalion had a very heavy knock on Christmas Eve. I had some narrow escapes myself; however, I got through all right with the exception of a slight wound on the knuckle of the forefinger, right hand, hardly worth speaking about.

At present we do 48 hours in the trenches and 48 hours rest. The weather is very wet and the trenches are in a terrible state with water. Still one never hears a grumble. The cold is kept away with a good issue of rum and a change of clothing. Everything imaginable is done to keep us fit—no lack of anything. The officers share the same hardships as the men, and, in fact, a little more. They are absolutely splendid, every one of them. This will just tell you the class they are.

Colonel Bent got wounded trying to save a wounded private who lay in front of his trench, and when the stretcher-bearers went for him he refused to be removed till all the wounded men were taken first. It was the same with Major Thompson. He lay outside his trench all day wounded, and still issued orders to his men till he died from exposure. Major Day's last words were: "Write to my wife and let her know I died a happy death." Captain O'Brien left his bit of cover and gave it to a private and was killed a few minutes afterwards.

Other officers were killed and wounded during the advance; still the men went forward and took the trenches at the point of the bayonet, thanks to our brave colonel, one of the best officers living; he is small but good. The regiment was specially mentioned for their work and they deserve every credit. It was a splendid bit of work; even the German machine guns did not make us stop.

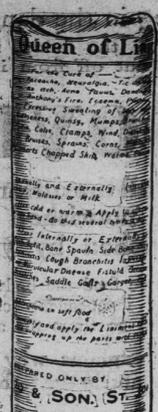

The order rang out: "Advance at the double, men." You should see how the order was obeyed. I could not find words to express how everything was carried out. We may have suffered a bit, but the Germans suffered a lot more. When you have officers like those I have mentioned you fear nothing. A man was killed today who volunteered to take a corporal's body out of the firing line. We have a priest attached to the battalion—Father Gleason, a Thurlow man. He said Mass for us on Christmas Day, actually in the firing line. Where he had his little altar, was peppered with bullets. He is a grand priest and knows no fear. He is never finished doing all in his power for everyone, even those who are not of the same religion. It is only natural that a Tipperary man should be brave. He is here now, only fifty yards from the trenches, with some neat crosses, which he made himself, to place over a few of our brave Fusiliers who died last night.

Nothing gives him greater pleasure than saying a Mass in the open, in cold wet, or hearing confessions in some old barn that has been half blown away by German shell fire. He even went to the little church near two stables out of it. Everything in it was blown to atoms except the altar.

A sergeant-major gave him a "telling off" over going in such dangerous places. However, we never practice what we preach, as the sergeant-major parades the same road every day with his upright walk and never seems to bob. His whole worry is, "Have the men in the trenches enough ammunition?" He is a fine fellow, and you can always be sure of a cup of hot tea at four o'clock every morning if he is about. All the old hands who left Aldershot with the battalion are dwindling away.

Our supplies of rum have just arrived. We were not very short, as the South Wales Borderers left two large jars last night.

COLLEGE GLEE CLUBS.

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old St. John's." A college glee club is a compact and well drilled body of men who escape from the campus usually during the Christmas holidays and penetrate long distances into the peaceful country, leaving a light blue wake with pink trimmings.

Glee clubs are so called because of the glee with which they make their trips. Next to a chance to promenade a few yards over the collar bones of a rival football team, the dearest ambition of the college student is to become a member of a glee club and travel in a private car. No man can know the full possibilities of travel in a Pullman car unless he has journeyed with a glee club whose enthusiastic members have spent the night throwing all the shoes they could find at the station agents as the train whizzed by.

It is also customary in high class college choral work to call some freshman member at 2 A.M. and to watch him trying to find his clothes in order to get off in ten minutes at a station agents as the train whizzed until after breakfast.

Owing to these and other scientific methods, the art of music has been greatly developed in our colleges and thousands of each listeners swarm to the theatres each year to hear the merry college boys. Formerly these boys sang playful college songs such as "Polly Wolly Doodle" and "Bringing Along." But nowadays they are more classical in their tastes. The Soldiers' Chorus is about as low down as the average glee club will go nowadays. This brings these organizations into active competition with grand opera and sends the audience away better men and women, but it confines the glee too strictly to the journey between stations.

Glee clubbing is the greatest endurance feat performed by the young American. Unless a young man can attend two receptions per afternoon, an alumni dinner each evening, can sing afterwards until twelve, can defend himself from kind friends all night and can tell an average of thirty-five pretty girls daily just how grand college life really is, he should not attempt to glee club very much. He should try some lighter form of endeavor like going to war.

The publisher of the best Farmer's paper in the Maritime Provinces in writing to us states: "I would say that I do not know of a medicine that has stood the test of time like MINARD'S LINIMENT. It has been an unfailing remedy in our household ever since I can remember, and has outlived dozens of would-be competitors and imitators."

Tell your friends, after trying VICTORY Flour, what wonderful results you have had.
