

Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets!

The season's vogue of soft materials that cling to the figure, portraying every defect, makes a careful study of the corset a necessity.

The semi-fitting frocks, for instance, are really more dependent upon the lines made by the corset than one imagines at first glance.

Our study has been to stock only such corsets as we know, through a thorough fitting test, to not only meet every style requirement but to fit, while adequately supporting comfortably.

Therefore we have selected WARNER'S RUST-PROOF CORSETS because they Shape Fashionably—Fit Comfortably—Will Not Rust, Break or Tear.

See our West Window for a Display of these well proven Corsets.

Humble Pie.

RUTH CAMERON.

Do you know how to accept an apology gracefully and generously?

The other day I happened to hear one woman apologize to another for an unkind thing she had done. She didn't try to excuse herself, she said bravely and simply that she had done an unkind thing and was sorry.

And what do you suppose the other woman answered? "So am I."

Just that. Nothing to soften it, or to show that she appreciated the other's penitence.

It was like a tub of cold water emptied on one's head. I fairly gasped in sympathy.

She won't apologize very soon again.

The woman who had apologized turned scarlet and shut her lips tightly together. I doubt if she will apologize to anyone very soon again.

And the woman who accepted her apology in that ungracious way will be to blame.

On another occasion I heard a mother whose daughter had come to her and, with what was evidently a painful effort, said she was very sorry she had been naughty, answer coldly, "That does no good now."

That was a brutal answer.

What a cruel answer to give a child! True, apologies cannot wipe out the consequences of a wrong, but they at least put one on record as regretting it and meaning to try to do better the next time.

It takes a good deal of courage to apologize. Many otherwise good and brave people do not seem to have the courage to own that they were wrong; have known people—men especially, I think this is particularly a masculine fault—who would do almost anything rather than own in so many words that they had been wrong. They would try to make up to you by being unusually kind and thoughtful, but when it came to saying, "I was wrong; I am sorry," there they absolutely balked.

There are other people who depend too much on apologies.

Of course there is another type of person who seems to think it doesn't matter what he does if he apologizes for it afterwards. Over and over again he will offend in the same way and then expect you to freely forgive him when he says he is sorry, though you know all the time the same thing will happen again.

People like this have only themselves to blame when penitence wears thin and their apologies are ungraciously received. They know how they can earn a more gracious response.

But to the person who is apologizing for an offence that one has no reason to think will be repeated, one owes a decent gracious response for one's own sake. To respond ungraciously is to prove one's self a bore.

Humble pie is the most disagreeable eating in the world. Be sympathetic enough to help it down with the relish of your gracious reception.

Mr. Widener Pays $200,000

FOR THE DOLLUS TAPESTRY. Famous "Crucifixion," from Morgan Collection, Bought by Philadelphia Collector.

Mr. Joseph E. Widener, of Philadelphia, who recently acquired the famous Mazarin tapestry from the J. Pierpont Morgan collection for a price reputed to have been $600,000, has just purchased another of the famous examples in the same collection from the art firm of P. W. French & Co., No. 6 East Fifty-sixth Street. His newest acquisition is "The Crucifixion," by Van Orley. This makes Mr. Widener the possessor of the two tapestries which connoisseurs hold to be the most important of the Morgan collection and which are declared to be unsurpassed in America.

Mr. Mitchell Samuels, of the firm of P. W. French & Co., yesterday confirmed the sale of the tapestry to Mr. Widener, and declined to state the price received. It is known from other sources, however, that Mr. Widener paid about $200,000.

There were forty tapestries in the Morgan collection, which was acquired about two months ago from Mr. J. P. Morgan by the art firm for a price said to have been $2,000,000. The tapestries are still at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, to which institution they were lent by the late Mr. Morgan, but will be removed about June 1st.

The tapestry which Mr. Widener has just bought is generally known, among collectors as the Dollus Crucifixion. It is wonderfully rich with gold. It once belonged to the magnificent Berwick and Alba collection, which was spoken of so reverently by William Morris at the time of the sale. It is a few years later in date than the Mazarin tapestry, having been woven about 1525, and is in the style of the early Renaissance. The design was the work of the Fleming who originated more tapestries than the other designer, Bernard Van Orley.—N.Y. Herald, May 10.

GENERAL IVANOFF RETIRES.

Czar Pays Great Tribute to His Work in the War.

Petrograd, April 4.—General I. N. Ivanoff has retired from the command of the Russian armies in Volhynia and Galicia.

Reuter's Petrograd correspondent says that General Brusiloff commanding the eighth army has been appointed commander-in-chief of the armies of the southwestern front, in succession to General Ivanoff.

Emperor Nicholas, in a rescript referring to the actions fought by General Ivanoff, particularly the great battles which led to the capture of Lemberg and Przemysl and also his brilliant resistance of the Austro-German forces on the Vistula, says he recalls with profound gratitude the military labors of General Ivanoff, his skilful handling of armies, and his love for his soldiers.

"These long months of work," says the Emperor in the rescript, "have impaired your health, and so I sadly accede to your request and relieve you to your functions. I appoint you to the Council of the Empire, and wishing to have the benefit of your experience and science, I attach you to my personal staff."

General Brusiloff has done notable work since the outbreak of the war. His troops in September, 1914, captured the town of Halicz in Galicia, and his victory enabled the Russians to defeat the Teutons at Salskopolje. For his achievements General Brusiloff was decorated by Emperor Nicholas. He is 63 years old.

British Papers to Be Smaller.

In consequence of the serious shortage of paper, at higher prices, which England is facing, the daily newspapers are asked to be ready to make a reduction of 40 per cent. in their pre-war size. It is even hinted that the Board of Trade may force a cutting down of the supply to publishers. The latter possibility is creating alarm in the English literary world. Many British newspapers are now setting their text matter in 7 point, in sympathy with their reduced size.

One man said to another, "I hear your wife has been taking singing lessons." "Yes," was the reply. "Well what do you think of her voice since it's been trained?" "It's no better, but there's a lot more of it."—Organist and Choirmaster.

James J. Grace Dies in Roxbury at Age of 79.

Retired Boston Millinery Merchant Erected Several Downtown Buildings and Was Long Time Prominent in Real Estate Circles—Came Here in 1863.

James J. Grace, a retired Boston merchant, who for many years was prominent in the millinery and real estate business, died yesterday at his home, 137 Hitchins Street, Roxbury. He was 79 years old and died from a complication of diseases incident to old age.

He was the descendant of old English and Irish families, tracing his ancestry back to the year 1016. He was born at St. John's, Newfoundland, in 1837, and was educated in the schools of that city, finishing his education at Stonyhurst College, England. In 1863, at the age of 26, he came to Boston and was employed in the dry goods houses of Gilchrist and Sheppard Norwell. He was offered the command of a colored regiment of troops which was recruited in New York, but allowed the honor to fall upon a man of American ancestry. In 1867, he opened a millinery establishment on Washington street. This burned in 1869 and he opened a second store on Temple place. He married Miss Margaret A. Costello, who also conducted a millinery establishment, and the two places were operated together until his retirement in 1912.

He was one of Boston's heaviest tax-payers for many years. He built the Grace building on Washington street, the Columbia Theatre and the adjoining building, the Mantua and Sheffield buildings on Tremont street, opposite the Majestic Theatre, the Head building at 181 Tremont street, next to Masonic Temple, and various other properties. At one time he owned the Langham Hotel.

He travelled in Europe extensively, making 16 trips with his family. He was one of the first extensive importers of millinery. He was a life member of the Catholic Union of Boston and was a member of the Charitable Irish Society.

During the second Cleveland administration, his only child, Pierce J. Grace, was the vice consul-general at London from 1892 to 1895. William J. Grace, who was one of New York City mayors, was one of his relatives. Besides his wife and son, two grandchildren, James J. Grace and Margaret A. Grace, survive him.—Boston Herald, May 8, 1916.

The first day I saw Niagara a man touched my arm as I looked up at those white waters. I turned to him. He had the smile of the confirmed joker. "It seems a shame," he said, "to see all this going to waste." "What are you?" I said; "an electrical engineer?" "No," he answered; "a milkman."—Everybody's Monthly.
