The Congrega- tional Pulpit.

The Rev. Dudley Ashford continues to attract such congregations as have been seen at Queen's Road for many years past. On Sunday last he delivered two sermons which will be remembered by all who heard him. His subject in the morning was Religion. The tendency of religion in all ages was to become distasteful to the people. This people distinguished between the secular and sacred, looked on Sunday as a holy time, and acted accordingly. But religion is the relation of life to God, which means that every aspect of life is to be lived in the light of that relation. God exists for thought; the best minds of all ages have dwelt on this great theme of God. But we must be aware of making our religion merely a matter of thought or emotion. For thought untouched by emotion will be cold and even barren and fruitless. Religion must be backed up by hands and feet. God also exists for emotion; the highest ecstasies and supreme joys are to be found in the life of religion. To be must be a matter of feeling. Emotion without thought will be unstable and frothy. Emotion without action will be vain and futile. The test of true religion is neither in what we think nor in what we feel, but in what we do. The whole sermon, on Christ's searching words in Matt. 7, 21, and strikingly illustrated. A plea for a religion whose principles were carried out into every department of life.

The evening sermon, entitled "Doubt and Sense," based on the familiar words of Mark 8, 36, was a plea to recognize the limitations of money. Money is either the highest happiness or the true riches. Life may be lived as physical, mental, moral, and spiritual; and it does not pay to sacrifice any of these merely for the sake of dollars. Dollars cannot compensate you for the loss of the physical life. Yet how many business men, work at high pressure for years, amass a fortune, only to find that they have ruined health and cannot enjoy life. Many of our keenest joys come through physical channels. The loss of eyes, shuts out the faces of friends, the joy of books, the delights of scenery. The loss of ears, makes you deaf to your baby's prattle, deaf to the singer's voice or to the delights of oratory. A healthy body, alive to the world in which we live is a tremendous asset which money cannot replace. Neither is it good business to get dollars and to miss the mental treasures. To deny a man education is to narrow the sphere of his pleasures, to cripple his life, and to rob him of a great inheritance. Such mental treasure can only be secured by deep digging into the mine of the world's great masterpieces, and requires much time and hard work. Dollars cannot purchase these treasures, and the millionaire with a huge library may be poorer than a poor man with a few good books. Many people sacrifice their moral life for the sake of dollars, but it is bad business. Life's only true asset lies in character. Only the wealth that you store up within you is truly yours. Nothing can compensate you for the loss of the moral life. And what of the greatest loss of all, the loss of the spiritual life, which men so often sacrifice for worldly gain. Most people are scarcely conscious of this loss, because they never trouble to develop the spirit life within them. Yet the spirit can only be developed by culture and culture requires much time and attention. Herein lies the true riches. You may have a big banking account, a beautiful body, a well stored mind, and a decent moral code, but what avails it if you miss the supreme treasures of a living faith in God and a hope beyond this life. The three vivid pictures from the lives of the Emperor Theodosius, the Emperor Charlemagne and the painter Leonardo di Vinci, illustrating the truth taught, will long be remembered by all present.

A Case for Real Charity.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—In company with a friend I visited, on Saturday afternoon the house on McNeil Street, referred to by "Charity" in a letter published in the Daily News on Saturday morning. A simple relation of the facts as I found them to be will be excused, I hope, for the good it may and should do.

The house we visited was situated in the backyard of another dwelling. It was six feet wide, eight feet long, six feet high, the walls of corrugated iron. It had one door, one window, with several loose panes, and in one end there was a bed, in the other a cook-stove. The family consists of husband, wife and four children, one eight months old, and two possibly twins. The wife and eldest child were not at home. The husband had been incapacitated for three years by tuberculosis of one arm and one leg, able to walk and not to work.

The backyard referred to is part of the premises on which the man's father and mother live. The father—a sanitary employee of the City—has been confined at home for three weeks by an accident while at work. He has quite a large family to care for, and can give little or nothing to the necessitous son; how he himself makes both ends meet I do not know.

How the son's family can be efficiently helped it is hard to say. Temporary relief has been offered, but a permanent change of conditions is essential. A better residence should be provided, and some permanent aid be supplied to enable the family to live. Food and clothing will be necessary, but first of all a decent place to live in must be found.

I have purposely refrained from expressing the emotions my friend and I felt at the sights we saw on this visit; they will be felt by anybody who will allow his imagination to construct a mental picture from the bare facts I give. If you, sir, will open a fund for subscriptions, I shall be glad to co-operate with you in its expenditure for the purpose of substantially wiping out a disgrace to our city and a reflection on our humanity. A good sized fund will be necessary, so please ask the merciful to be generous.

Yours truly,
ALFRED B. MORINE,
St. John's, March 8th, 1919.

[In connection with the above extreme case, the Editors of the city newspapers have been asked by Mr. Morine to act as a Committee with him to receive and expend, as they may deem expedient, any monies donated to the relief of the unfortunate family referred to. The Telegram will gladly receive and acknowledge any contributions made, and trust that the response to this appeal will be liberal and prompt.—Editor Evg. Telegram.]

The Committee therefore, will be as follows:—Sir Patrick McGrath, Hon. Mr. Mews, J. S. Currie, M.H.A., H. M. Mosdell, M.D., C. T. James, and A. B. Morine, K.C., Convenor.

West Coast Notes.

Messages last week state there was no ice along the coast from Bonne Bay to Point Riche.

It is rumored that some three or four schooners will prosecute the sealfishery from Channel.

Experienced people say that conditions in the Gulf are favorable for a successful sealing voyage this season.

Lomond is the name selected for the place where the St. Lawrence Timber, Pulp and Steamship Company's mills are being erected in Bonne Bay.

The St. Lawrence Co., at Lomond, Bonne Bay, has four camp crews in the woods this winter and the cut is expected to average a million each—Western Star.

The Majestic Theatre.

To-day the Majestic Theatre presents another highly interesting feature in the form of a drama of the Ivan Film Corporation entitled "Babbling Tongues" a picture in many ways resembling "The Sins of Ambition," shown last week and very highly praised by Majestic patrons. That "Babbling Tongues" will find even more favor with lovers of good, clean drama of the better kind, we feel certain. There is something distinctly human about the tale of the young and friendless man who, as the result of a former good act of his father, is taken into a comfortable home and finds his dearest hopes for fame and honor about to be realized, is suddenly confronted by a situation as unthought of by him as it is likely to become disastrous. Gossip, which ever seeks new victims, couples his name with that of the young and beautiful wife of the man who has given him a home, and the story as it is unfolded lacks neither vitality nor realism; while it is also rich in the beauty of clothes, scenery and setting. "Babbling Tongues" is certainly one of the best stories of its kind ever screened in this city and has its own especial appeal because of the startling lesson it teaches.

Nearly Drowned.

While playing around A. Harvey and Co.'s wharf at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon with a number of other boys, a young lad named Kelly tripped, and fell over the wharf-head and into the water between the wharf and the S. S. Sable I, which was lying there. His plight was no enviable one, when a Mr. A. Brown, of Harvey and Co.'s employ, who had been standing nearby, threw off his vest and coat, and descending to the water's edge by means of one of the wharf shores, grasped the boy by the hair, and began to climb up with him. Another man, who leaned over the head of the wharf, caught young Kelly and hauled him to safety. The action of Mr. Brown cannot be too highly praised, as those who have been on A. Harvey and Co.'s wharf will testify to. The boy was not injured.
