RUB THE OTHER EYE.

Good Advice of an Engineer Regarding the Removal of Cinders.

Nine persons out of every ten with cinder or any foreign substance in the eye will instantly begin to rub the eye with one hand while hunting for their handkerchief with the other. They may and sometimes do remove the offending cinder, but more frequently they rub until the eye becomes nflamed, bind a handkerchief around the head, and go to bed. This is all wrong.

A few years since I was riding on the threw open the front window, and I caught a cinder that gave me the most excruciating pain. I began to rub the eye with both hands. "Let your eye alone and rub the other eye" (this from the engineer). I thought he was chaffing me and worked the harder. "I know you doctors think you know it all, but if you will let that eye alone and rub the other one, the cinder will be out in two minutes," persisted the engineer. I began to rub the other eye, soon I felt the cinder down near the inner canthus, and made ready to take it out.

"Let it alone and keep at the well eye," shouted the doctor pro tem. I did so for a minute longer, and looking into a small giass he gave me found the offender on my cheek. Since then I have tried it many times, and have advised many others, and have never known it to fail in one instance,

unless it was something sharp as a piece of steel or something that cut the ball and required an operation to remove it. - Med-

THE TEALE CASE.

Charge Changed from Indecent to Common Assault.

Accused Pleads Guilty-Fined Ten Dollars or a Month - Charlotte Kunwicke, the Complainant, Breaks Dewn - Mrs. Russell Is All Right.

As usual when cases of scandalous nature are on the blotter, the crowd at the Police Court was very large today, both inside and outside the railing. The curious throng had come to hear the developments in the case of John Teale, accused of indecently assaulting Charlotte Kunwicke. The case came up at the finish of the docket, and when an order was given to clear the court room some of the sightseers looked as though they had expected a big legacy, but didn't get it. This course had been decided at the urgent request of some of the parties concerned. Teale was seated in front of the dock and took everything very unconcernedly. The girl did not put in an appearance till the room was cleared.

Mr. E. Meredith, who appeared for the accused, told the court that Mr. McKillop (for the crown) would be satisfied with a charge of common assault. To this Teale had agreed to plead guilty. No person more than Teale regretted the affair, but it was caused through his being under the influence of liquor. In view of his previous excellent character counsel asked that the prisoner be discharged.

Mr. McKillop had nothing to say further. He was willing to accept the

The magistrate wanted to hear the girl's side of the story before passing judgment. The complainant was sent for, but when she appeared at the door of the court room she burst into tears and began to walk away. She was finally prevailed upon to come inside. The poor girl did not cease her wailings. She made straight for a chair, and during the remainder of the proceedings sat with her head down and a handkerchief over her face. She did not tell her story.

Chief Williams told the court that Miss Kunwicke came from the old country about ten years ago, and lived until a year ago with a farmer west of St. Thomas. The house was broken up and Miss Kunwicke came to the city, where she obtained employment in a very respectable and wealthy family, and during her nine months' service there had borne an excellent character.

The police magistrate told Teale that he had a narrow escape, and it should be a warning to him and others. He was fined $10 or a month.

The witnesses summoned were John Partridge, Charles Stevens and Robert Robinson.

WANTED HER CHARACTER CLEARED. Mrs. Alfred Jones and Mrs. Mary E. Russell live on Bathurst street and are neighbors. They had a little row and Mrs. Russell accused Mrs. Jones of using abusive language. They stood side by side and when one would advance toward the police magistrate the other would follow suit. "What did she do, Mrs. Russell?" asked the court.

Mrs. Russell-She hurt my character. The Police Magistrate-Nothing has peen said against your character. Mrs. Russell-Yes, there has; I don't want any person to call me a prostitute. Neither do I want Mrs. Jones punished.

Mrs. Jones-I deny the charge. Mrs. Russell-You did call me that name, and I want my character cleared. The Police Magistrate (to Mrs. Russell)-Well, there; your character is clear; never was better.

And the women walked out. AN UNRULY YOUTH. Daniel Walsh, a boy of about 15 years, was charged by his stepmother, Mrs. Esther Walsh, with using threatening language towards her. The woman did not wish to prosecute and the youngster was taken home. THEY SOLD KNIVES.

Michael D. Henry and Edward Pridham are the two young men arrested by Detective Thomas Nickle while selling knives at the corner of King and Clarence streets, The police learned where the articles came from, but on account of their value it was decided not to prosecute the prisoners.

George Mathew, another youth, will appear on Tuesday. He has a charge against him of throwing stones through the windows of Mrs. Tweedy's house, on Talbot Salvator Specuzza, a local banana man, was summoned for letting his cart stand on the sidewalk. Salvator is now in St. Thomas selling fruit and will be up when he returns.

MADAME REJANE.

The French Actress Who Has Rivalled

Bernhardt in Popularity. An example of the fact that one good thing does not necessarily injure another, alongside which it is brought in competi tion for the public favor, has been shown in London lately, where Mme. Bernhardt and Mme. Rejane, the two famous French actors, have been playing simultaneously. The appearance of either is a dramatic event of the first order, yet Rejane's entrance upon the field, and the attraction of all London to hear her, did not diminish the crowds which gathered at Bernhardt's performances. If anything, the success of Bernhardt's engagement was augmented by the appearance of Rejane. This was probably due in part to the fact that the art of the two actors was so different that those who went to see one were drawn to see the other by the very contrast. There was something remarkable about Rejane's success, nevertheless; for in holding her own against Bernhardt she has done what Coquelin failed to do two years ago.

Rejane's engagement in London might be called the most memorable incident of the season, for it introduced a new dramatic; star to the English world. Though Rejans has represented widely different characters, her true vocation is broad comedy. Yet she is a thorough mistress of her art, and her performance in the tragic moments of "Madame Sans-Gene"—the play by Sardon which introduced her to London-is praised almost as warmly as her simple, natural, piquant work in the comic parts. To give some idea of her versatility, it may be mentioned that she has appeared with almost equal success as "Germinie Lacerteux" in the horrible De Goncourt play, and as Portia in a French version of Shakespeare's comedy.

Mme. Rejane is really Mme. Porel, wife of one of the two directors of the Gymnase and Vaudeville theatres in Paris. Her maiden name was Gabrielle Reju, and she was brought up in a theatrical atmosphere. In 1875, after a Conservatoire training under the celebrated Regnier, she made her first appearance at the Vaudeville Theatre. A brilliant performance at the Ambigu as the heroine of Richepin's play "La Glu" brought her to the front; ther followed a successful engagement at the Palais Royal in "Ma Camarade," and she became a favorite of the Parisian public, One of the most notable and curious events

MME. REJANE, THE NEWEST DRAMATIC STAR. in her career was her appearance in "Mi Cousine," at the Varieties; her part includ ed a dance of the cancan or chahut order, so she took thereupon lessons from the famous Mdlle. "Grille d'Egout," and de lighted and astounded Paris by a perform ance of great skill and startling audacity

A curious feature of the history of the stage during the last twelve month was noted a few days ago by an English critic who remarked that of the four actors whe had occupied the largest share in popular attention not one was an Englishwoman The four were Bernhardt, Duze, Rejand and Rehan. This leaves out Ellen Terry. who must surely be counted among the great actors, yet who does not stand alone like the four mentioned, but is coupled in the public mind with Irving. The classification is interesting as showing the impression which Rejane has made upor England.

THE FASTEST VESSEL

TWENTY-NINE AND A QUARTER KNOTS MADE BY THE DARING.

An English Marvel of Marine Architecture-Her Mission is to Destroy Fleet Torpedo Boats-She Will Apparently Have No Difficulty in Doing It.

That the limit of speed at which a small craft can be driven through the water has not yet been reached is shown in the recent record of the Thornycroft torpedo gunboat Daring. That vessel has set the pace at 291 knots, and marine engineers are now confident that even this clipping gait will be excelled by some later vessel of the Daring's type.

The Daring is the first vessel of a class of five torpedo boat destroyers which are being constructed by Messrs. Thornycroft & Co. for the British government. When completed the quintet will form part of the new "destroyer flotilla," which is the latest departure in the admiralty naval policy. The mission of these vessels is to overtake an enemy's torpedo boats and destroy them by shell fire delivered from a battery of rapid-fire guns. They are also equipped for delivering a fatal blow to larger antagonists. The 18 inch Whitehead torpedoes, which can be launched from the bow, have a speed of over thirty knots per hour, and a range of 700 yards. No vessel ever constructed could withstand the explosion of such a mass against her hull, and it is a safe proposition to make to say that a ship which is hit by such a projectile is a ship destroyed. But the main purpose for which the Daring and other vessels of her class were constructed is to chase and destroy the torpedo boats of the enemy. The torpedo boat itself is, from the very nature of its calling, a very speedy craft, and of course for a vessel which is designed to destroy them a higher speed than they can show is essential

Besides this absolutely necessary characteristic, there were other features which the builders had to consider. The vessel was required to be as small as possible, so as to escape, in a certain measure, the danger of being struck by the missiles of a hostile man-of-war. At the same time i was pointed out that a torpedo vessel should be sufficiently large to cruise at sea, and to carry a battery large enough to penetrate the hulls of her smaller foes.

It is therefore seen that the torpedoboat destroyer is a vessel of compromises. Take away the limit of size, and marine engineers would find a way of putting sufficient power in the hull to drive the craft through the water at a greater rate than has already been attained. Dispense with the extreme lightness or draught, considered essential from the fact that torpedo boats can flee into shoal waters, and the problem of high speed becomes simpler

In the Daring the Messrs. Thornycroft pride themselves in having produced a vessel that meets all requirements. She has high speed, her size is none too great, and the battery which she will be enabled to mount can throw a concentrated hail of missiles at a range beyond that of any of the smaller foes.

The vessel measures 185 feet in length has a beam of 19 feet, and a draught of 's feet. The engines are of a novel type which the firm has recently patented. In constructing them, the object sought for was to so arrange the position of cranks and cylinders as to reduce the unbalanced forces to a minimum. This has been successfully achieved. The boilers are three in number, and are of the improved Thornycroft water-tube type. They are capable of generating steam from cold water within fifteen minutes. The torpedo destroyer must not be confounded with the torpedo boat. The two are distinct types. The chief distinction is that the former can cruise and the latter cannot. The torpedo boat is the acknowledged superior of the torpedo destroyer in every other respect. The British admiralty intends to add these vessels in large numbers to the navy list. Lord Brassey is of the opinion that two to each battleship and twenty-five for coast defense would not be too many.

Notorious Fire Bug Caught. KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 16 .- J. M. Loggan, a fire bug, was arrested early this morning just after he had set fire to the vards of the Kansas City Lumber Company. Loggan, who has been playing the torch for 30 years, boasts of his crimes, and says 15 of the 30 years have been spent in prison. He has operated for pleasure in every part of the United States.

EXPLAINING IT.

A little girl of this city recently gave a forcible though unconscious illustration of what foreigners find a perplexing peculiarity of our language. Her younger brother inquired: "Do cows give beef and ham?" "Of course they don't," was the scornful reply. "You ought to know better than that. Cows lay milk."

THE THOUGHTFUL ESCORT. Miss Hearty-I'm so awfully hungry, and here is nothing but salad, cake, and ice cream. Agy-'Sh! Here's a corned beef sandwich that I wheedled out of one of the hackmen only two minutes ago ! Tired, Weak, Ne vous
