REMEMBER MOTHER [By the Poet BIII.]

Bill, the well- known and justly famous noet, is always on the job to chronday being observed as "Mothers' Day," Bill naturally could not keep his pencil still, and in the following collection of words expresses his sentiments in the matter of observing the day.

We will now introduce the poem, entitled, "Mothers' Day":

REMEMBER MOTHER Let this now another year

If we happened to have a fall.

Sick near to death with the flu, Remember Mother. Though to us she is out of sight,

Attending to both child and dad,

But to her your respect is given, She will look to you from heave Remember Mother. If yet on earth she is here, The only friend is Mother dear;

Let the flowers to her be bright, Of different hue, to her delight. Remember Mother. Mother, to us now so dear, Will be counted with the blest

And taken away to her Remember Mother. Father seems to be set aside, But he should not forget his day, When he took Mother for his bride,

To remember her till death takes her away. Remember Mother.
