With reference to the question of overwork in the public schools, the committee reported that they were officially reported that they were officially informed by the Inspector that the home informed by the Inspector that the home informed by the Inspector that the home informed by the Inspector that the work at present assigned to the pupils in our schools is not too great in amount, and our schools is not too great in amount, and that due allowance is always made for those who, for constitutional or other reathose who, for constitutional or other reatho after the qualifications of most of them had in been enquired into. Dr. Wright, observing:

With reference to the question of overwork in the public schools, the committee reported that they were officially informed by the Inspector that the home work at present assigned to the papils in our schools is not too great in amount, and that due allowance is always made for those who, for constitutional or other reasons find the lessons too hard. They had had no evidence submitted to them to show that overwork exists or has existed during the past two years in the school, except in rare cases, which have always been promptly dealt with. They added that they would be glad to investigate any further cases of supposed overwork which might be submitted to them.

Mr. Lee explained that the report was not intended to end the matter, but was all the committee could say with the evidence at present before them. The withdrawn as it looked like shelving the did not cover all the ground. Dr. Ogden said there were a very few complaints of examining or overwork. Most of the complaints he had heard were that the children were not being pushed on fast enough. After some further discussion the report was adopted.
