VACCINATION.

Some of its Benefits and the Method of Avoiding Them.

L. A. Loveland, M.D., in Medical World. "Several years ago I vaccinated a person whose health had always been excellent and who had never had any kidney disease. The result was a severe attack of albuminuria, which was directly from one of the most reliable propagators of the disease. The operation was carefully performed, and was a success as far as related to its primary object. In about a month after vaccination the patient became dropsical. The urine was heavily charged with albumen; the skin was dry; appetite and strength diminished; in short the presentation of a typical case of acute albuminuria existed. So obvious was the cause of death that no post mortem examination was made. Authorities mention artificial and syphilitic poison as among the causes producing Bright's disease. I speak of the scarlet fever, measles, smallpox, as sometimes being the cause of albuminuria. If this is so, there is no good reason why vaccination may not occasionally become an etiological factor. In the case we are considering the evidence that it was the cause is quite plain. The precise way in which the poison gained an entrance into the system and performed its deadly work is impossible to determine. Should Bright's disease arise, even in rare instances after vaccination, it would be for suffering humanity."

Dr. Loveland clearly shows that even so simple a matter as vaccination is liable to result in Bright's disease. Indeed medical authorities state that during the preparatory stages of smallpox there is albuminuria, and if this is so, undoubtedly vaccination, which produces a mild form of the disease, will be attended by some manifestation thereof.

The fact of the matter is, and it is getting to be more and more recognized every day, a very little disturbance of the system will produce derangements of the kidneys, which, eventually, result in Bright's disease. Over-anxiety; physical excesses; mental worry; excessive indulgence in certain stimulants and narcotics; frequent changes of life and habits; the taking of a cold; changes of season and climate, all have a tendency to affect the system unfavorably and to produce a diseased condition of the kidneys.

People labor under a very erroneous impression who think that such disorders are rare, for it is a matter of record that primarily or secondarily they are the cause of a very large percentage of deaths.

Vaccination is perfectly right and proper, for there is no better preventive known to the profession. A very small amount of vaccine if it "takes" affects the whole system. On the contrary, a very small amount of medicine, if it is of the right kind, has equally powerful effect in the blood when properly administered.

It seems almost like vain repetition to state that pure blood means good health, but it is evident that the belief is popular from the fact that so many so-called remedies are advertised as the best blood purifiers.

Now, in order to purify the blood a remedy must be alterative, and in considerable measure a diuretic; that is to say, it must have the elements in it that will act upon the kidneys as purifiers and will promote the action of the organs which remove the poison from the blood. Unless it has these elements it is absurd to call it a blood purifier.

The tired feeling; the depressed head; the fluttering at the stomach; a sense of faintness; an indigestible feeling of uneasiness and restlessness, all indicate, not disease necessarily of any one organ, but a torpid and heavy condition of the blood. It is impossible to purify a stream except at its source. It is impossible to keep the blood rich unless it is purified by the organs which nature has provided for that purpose.

We have shown, as we think every journalist ought to show to his readers, if he do so, that the human kidneys are susceptible to the least cause disturbing the natural operation of the system, and it is by nature to remove the waste and poisonous material of the blood and to wash it out of the system. This operation seems very simple, but owing to the fact concealed by the medical profession generally, until the discovery of Warner's safe cure there was no known remedy which had any certain power over functional or chronic diseases of the kidneys or over blood impurities, consequently blood purification through these organs has been a difficult matter to perform if nature were at all deranged.

It is useless to multiply words on this subject because that remedy has a reputation conceded by the most intelligent physicians, of being without exception the most beneficial discovery in the realm of medicine ever made.

Vaccination is justifiable and proper as a preventive of smallpox, and if the remedy above mentioned is used in connection with the operation of vaccination, it is doubtful if an injurious effect will follow. The manufacturers state that they know from long extensive experience in treating the sick, that blood disorders are extremely prevalent and that, judging from their own experience, there can possibly be no agency so effective in preventing and curing such disorders ever known. Children and grown people alike are affected by it and unless nature is given assistance at the proper time by special agency such as we have named, persons so afflicted must succumb to the forces which are constantly trying to draw them down.

The Eternal Witness. A Missouri farmer who was on trial a few days ago for assault and battery on his daughter declared that he had great confidence in the safe cure. When asked to state particulars he replied:

"She was a-keeping company with Jim Longley."

"But isn't Jim all right?" asked the lawyer.

"Why, his character may be all right, but—"

"But what?"

"Well, she bull thing is just this: Sarah is cross-eyed, as you see for yourself, and Jim is the most well-to-do man in the state. I tried to make Sarah understand that every one of her children would be like her, and she got up and called me a liar and threatened to burn my three haystacks. If Sarah can't realize the eternal fitness of things she must take the consequences."

Mr. Alexander Robinson of Exeter, in writing about one of the most popular articles, and one that has done more good than any other in the world, has been in existence since 1840. He has used four bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Gynopelia that troubled me for over ten years. Part of that time I had it very bad, and I was at considerable expense trying to get relief; but this excellent medicine was the first and only relief I received."

A Fatal Fight Between Tigers. From the St. Louis Gazette. At Wombwell & Hootcock's menagerie at Norwich yesterday, November 19, one of three Bengal performing tigers attacked another and killed it by severing its wind-pipe with its teeth. The animal was worth about $400.

A letter from F. O. Sharpless, druggist, Marion, Ohio, is in writing of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, says: One man was cured of sore throat of eight years' standing with one bottle. We have a number of cases of rheumatism that have been cured when other remedies have failed. We consider it the best medicine sold.

BE ORIGINAL!

Don't do things because other people do. Don't try to make people believe you are smart when you are not. Don't be a clam. Be original.

Don't take a soapmaker's advertisement and palm it off for a clothier's; it looks bad, it's not business. Don't be a clam. Be original.

Don't buy clothing from houses who have no ideas of their own, who have no styles of their own, who copy everything they do. Don't be a clam. Be original.

Don't deal with houses who don't advertise what they mean; don't pay more for clothing to copiers than you can buy it from the originators for. Don't be a clam. Be original.

Don't go to church on Sunday and on Monday steal a soapmaker's brains and palm them off for your own. Don't be a clam. Be original.

Don't ask people to deal with you when you don't mean what you advertise, for how can a man believe one who would try to palm off a soapmaker's advertisement for a clothier's? Don't be a clam. Be original.

Don't go around other stores looking for new ideas. Originate for yourself above all. If you are in the clothing business, stick to it and don't go into soap. Don't be a clam. Be original.

Don't pay $5 for a pair of pants when you can get them for $3.50. Don't pay $20 for an Overcoat when you can buy the same for $16, and others as low down as $4.50, and sewed with wax thread instead of soap, at Jamieson's, corner Yonge and Queen streets. Don't be a clam. Be original.

Don't set your children a bad example by stealing a soapmaker's advertisement to palm it off for a clothier's. Educate them. Don't let them be clams. Be original.

Don't go anywhere else for clothing for yourself or your children than to JAMIESON, The Clothier. The creator for the copyists; the originator for the imitator. The great clothier of Canada. Don't be a clam. Be original.
