Guff From Gotham,
Henry Allen to J. J. Dixon & Co.: The market is booming at a very lively rate and the anticipation which had been freely expressed that the advance would stop after Christmas seems to have been mistaken. The business of the week tended to exaggerate and strengthen the advance. To-day some of the left-over business was transacted, and this factor will protably make a showing in the figures of sales, yet it seems to be a genuine advance, and there are no lack of causes to a count for it. The banks have gathered a phenomenal surplus. The large deposits give testimony of the amount of unused money seeking investment. The relative railroad earnings continue large and traffic isstill more or less elogged. In addition to the ordinary factors which exercise an important influence the day of disbursement at the beginning of the year is at hand, and this means activity in the money market. While is cannot be doubted that the market has not yet reached its highest figures, the time when these figures will be attained it is not safe to predict, and even advancing markets are subject to relapses almost from day to day.
