

The book contains numerous illustrations and marginal decorations

"Howdy, Honey, Howdy" is a volume of poems by the negro poet, Paul Laurence Dunbar, profusely illustrated.

A very pretty volume is Henry Van Dyke's "The Childhood of Jesus Christ." It comes in three bindings—cloth, 50c, canton silk, 75c, and leather, $1

"The Great Word," by Hamilton Wright Mabie, will be sure to be in big demand

Early next month there will be ready "The Wild Flower Fairy Book," by Esther Singleton. The illustrations are in color and the pages will be decorated

Advance orders for "The Gambler," by Katharine Cecil Thurston, which has just been published in Canada by the Fleming H. Revell Co., were excellent, and, judging from the popularity of the author's previous book, "The Masquerader," it should sell well

A story which the Fleming H. Revell Co. believe will take well is "St. Cecilia of the Court," by Isabella R. Hess, which will be published this Fall. It affords a glimpse into "how the other half lives," where the patron saint is a fiery-tempered little Irish girl, who is trained into the meaning of love by two or three great-hearted men

A "first novel" for which great things are being predicted is "St. Cuthbert's," by Dr. R. E. Knowles, the orator and wit of the Presbyterian Church of Canada. It has the distinction of a first novel of being published simultaneously in New York, Toronto and London. The author, Dr. Knowles, is just returning from a Summer in England and Scotland, to his parish in Galt, Ontario, where he preaches to the largest Presbyterian congregation in Canada, for Galt, though only a small town of barely 8,000 inhabitants, is known as the Gibraltar of Scotch Presbyterianism

The Fleming H. Revell Co. announce that Norman Duncan's new book, "The Mother," will be issued on the fifteenth of the month. Beside the regular edition, "The Mother" will appear in a limited edition de luxe, with special decoration and printing

A year or so ago a book was published in Canada which attracted considerable attention. It bore the name, "Where the Sugar Maple Grows," and was the work of Miss Teskey, a lady living in Welland, Ontario

A new book by the same author is promised for this Fall by the Fleming H. Revell Co. It will be called "The Village Artist," and will be even more charming than its predecessor because of the fact that it will contain all the characteristic bits of writing which were removed from the latter.

Morang & Co., Limited.

Morang & Co., Limited, are presenting a very strong list of fiction for Fall publication. The most notable of new novels will be Winston Churchill's "Coniston." "Coniston" does not belong to the series dealing with American history, which included "Richard Carvel," "The Crisis," and "The Crossing." It is a romantic story written with the same spirit and vigor, and is rather more humorous than any book he has so far attempted.

Marion Crawford contributes "Fair Margaret," a story of a great singer, Margaret Donne, daughter of an Oxford don and an American woman.

Maurice Hewlett's "The Fool Errant" goes back to the author's most popular book in style. It is the story of an English youth who goes to study law at Padua under a celebrated Doctor Lanfranchi.

Emerson Hough's new novel, "Heart's Desire," is a western story which reminds one of "The Virginian." It is a romantic story, remarkably interesting and remarkably vivid.

Charles Major, author of "When Knighthood was in Flower," has written a new and fascinating romance in the same vein as his former books. It is full of extraordinary adventures, and is altogether a very captivating story. "Yolanda" is illustrated by Charles Weber-Ditzler.

Samuel Merwin has produced a story dealing with the subject of railroad building. It is much in the style of "Calumet 'K,'" and is very dramatic, breezy and adventurous.

The popular author of "The Secret Woman," Eden Phillpotts, has this time given to the public a volume of short stories, also dealing with the natives of Dartmoor.

"The Jungle" describes the adventures of a family of Lithuanian emigrants in the Chicago stock yards. The subject is an unusual one, and the treatment is also unusual. It is believed by his friends to be the long-looked-for labor novel.

Owen Wister's "Lady Baltimore" is a pure romance, the story of the love entanglements of a charming young Southerner.

Ernest Thompson-Seton in his new book, "Animal Heroes," narrates the history of a cat, a dog, a pigeon, a lynx, two wolves, and a reindeer, in a most human and vivid manner. Like his former books, "Wild Animals I Have Known," and "Biography of a Grizzly," "Animal Heroes" is illustrated by over 200 of the most fascinating sketches by the author.

Another book which is expected to have a notable sale is Stanley Weyman's "Starvecrow Farm." The story describes the exciting adventures of Henrietta Damer, a lady of high birth and breeding, who elopes with a man beneath her in station and finally marries, not the man with whom she elopes, but a former suitor who pursues them.

Henry Wallace Phillips, author of "Red Saunders," has written a very vivid and humorous tale, "Plain Mary Smith." Bill Saunders is a very taking hero and carries things through with a dashing vigor which cannot but give the reader great entertainment.

Morang & Co. have also a list of four new juvenile
