

with a fearless mind. Love and power would keep him from falling, and bring him up again with his floral prize—a trophy of his father's affection and his own faith.—Christian Miscellany.

A NATIVE SCHOOL IN NEW ZEALAND.

A missionary in New Zealand thus writes:—"The children, I am happy to say, take the greatest possible interest in the school; but the parents do not value learning for their children as they ought. We never hear of a mother
