cure for indigestion is proper foods properly masticated and plenty of water, hot or cold, as most palatable. standard grades of wheat in all mar- I have known several radical cures. One man fasted for five weeks, living only upon cold water and what medicine his physician ordered. At the end of that time the indigestion was cured, and it has remained cured, but it took months of careful diet—two meals a day—to bring the man back to his ordinary strength. Another case, a lady, cured herself of the same complaint by drinking quantities of cold water—but, as her sister remarked, "life was not worth living while doing it." There is liftle doubt, however, that few people drink enough only upon cold water and what medi-cine his physician ordered. At the end He hoped for good results from rate legislation.
