personal friend of the accused.

The charge against Lott, for which he will appear before Magistrate Flint on Friday, is that he "did unlawfully conspire with one F. J. Reilly, the Thomas E. Whelan, one W. J. Shibley and one Phil. WHAT REILLY SAID. me One Tried to Make a Scape goat of Him.

Montreal, Nov. 22.-A special from Kingston says: "I consider that certain parties are endeavoring to make a scapegoat of me, and that I am inurring much odium which should and will be fastened elsewhere," said J. F. Reilly, who, as O. J. Reilly, has figured rominently in the evidence heard at he preliminary investigation of the liel suit arising out of the bogus ballot ox scandal at Belleville.

Mr. Reilly is well-known in Kingston For the last five years he has been resident here, first as a student a Queen's, whence he graduated in the autumn of last year and later as a "I am confident that the true facts of he case will clear my skirts when I tate them before the judge in Belle-when asked what these facts were, Mr. Reilly stated that he was not at liberty to divulge them.

When pressed, however, he stated that his connection with the case was entirely incidental. Thruout the summer and autumn he had been in the habit of running over to Watertown to visit relatives. He had been told by certain Liberals, whose names he would not divulge, that a little device, which would prove of use to the party, was being perfected and manufactured on his return. He had done so, but was ignorant what the device was at the time.

He admitted meeting a Mr. Lott in Kingston. He was ignorant as to which Mr. Lott he was. He had arranged to forward some money from him to, the party at Watertown. He had not shown him the working of the box, as he was ignorant of what it was. Later, just one week before the elections, he had seen the boxes and had recognized the enormity of the offence. He regretted the slight part he had in the affair. He was prepared to swear that he had nothing to do with inventing, manufacturing or forwarding the boxes. This had already been arranged by the above parties beforehand. Mr. Reilly also stated that he had never personally received one dollar for his services.

The remark that "Only God Almighty could beat the Ross government at the next elections" had not been made by him.

Mr. Reilly further stated that he believed the Lott who had given testimony at Belleville was a traitor to his world. Nov. 22.—A. G. MacKay in the testimony at Belleville was a traitor to his world.
