LAURELS WON BY MARGARET ANGLIN

Stephen Young Man in Her Company Also Wins Praise

St. Croix Courier: Margaret Anglin, a gifted actress and niece of Mrs. Hugh Cullinan and the late Alexander Cullinan, who spent a portion of her childhood days in St. Stephen, has been named new and great laurels in the production of a new play in California. "Electra" is the name of the new play, and of its production in the great open theatre in Oakland, before 8,000 people, the Oakland Tribune says: "Eight thousand people, breathless in face of an art that outstripped all at usually calls itself by that name, for two hours, scarcely moving under a spell of Margaret Anglin's 'Electra' the Greek theatre last evening, but when the actress had written her way the front of the stage and kissed the eager of vengeance, casting it down and lifting her arms in mute prayer of thanksgiving, standing thus with her hands slowly on across the altar of Dionysus, there broke a storm cheering, through the giant amphitheatre that told generally of recognition, of gratefulness, of adoration. For would that storm be stayed, Time again Miss Anglin was forced to return to the stage, bringing with her a company and then another, and then along alone. Finally she spoke again to at monster crowd. "I think I have told the people of California," she said, "so many, many, of all the thankfulness my heart toward them, told them so often at I seem to have no heart left. You re made me very very happy. I can't say more than that. God bless you."

One of the members of Miss Anglin's sporting company, is Donald Cameron of Augustus Cameron, of St. Stephen, and of his work the Tribune says: "Praise was done by Donald Cameron, actor who could make a 'friend of restes' a breathing character."

THE MAN WHO BROUGHT ALFALFA FROM SIBERIA

In 1897 James Wilson, then Secretary of Agriculture, who had known Professor Hansen at Ames, called upon him to go to Russia and Asia as the nation's first plant explorer. He was to get drought-resistant and cold-resistant plants of commercial value to supplement those of the Northwest or other parts of the United States. Having crossed through Northern Europe, and made his way eastward and then southwestward across Russia again, the Professor turned southward through Transcaucasia, and then sailed over the Caspian Sea to the realms of the Turkoman. Here he came face to face with the problem in the discovery of a hardy alfalfa.

It was almost like discovering a new continent. Here was an alfalfa that nature, doubtless through thousands of years, had inured to drought and cold. It held hardness. Hardiness had been worked into it by nature's slow processes as the plant had traveled with infinite pains from the southward; perhaps in Persia, where as the common alfalfas of the United States had traveled another way. These were taken from Persia to Greece in the fifth century B. C. Thence they were carried to Italy and Spain, and after that to South America, long after which they were brought to the southwestern States. They had never had an opportunity to spread northward through long centuries of time, becoming hardy by infinitely slow degrees, as had those in the part of Asia where Professor Hansen had just made his discovery. With the discoverer's philosophy of plant-hardiness, however, the hardness of these new alfalfas could be transferred to other alfalfas, and a variety both luxuriant and hardy could be invented. That is, if this newly discovered alfalfa would not itself do as a successful forage in the Middle West of the United States. But the thing to do was to follow this new plant northward, and find out the home of the hardiest of the hardy. With this in mind he set out. He followed the trail across deserts, among
