The supervision of the service as a whole lies with the Department of Marine and Fisheries at Ottawa, and when considering the value of the fisheries it is a matter of congratulation that progressive steps have been taken to assist nature by the establishing of hatcheries at such points as would tend to the increase of that great commercial commodity the salmon.

Previous to 1901 there was only one natchery in operation, which was located on the Fraser river near New Westminster. From this one establishment there was an annual output o five and a half millions of young sal-
