It was all well enough forgentlemen to laugh, but we were really keeping the Inspector as well as paying his salary. He moved that the salary be $100.

Coun Robertson said if they ested the was sure that Chatham would pay his own expenses and advertising. Coun. Cunningham said he had a few remarks to make. The wharf should belong to the public. It had been left to the public. Was it legal to either sell or lease it? If public property it should not belong to three or four individuals.

The Sec.—Treasurer said they had better follow the law, make an official valuation, and do justice to the name of Mr. Mackenzie and substitute that of Robert H. Anderson.

Coun. Cunningham spoke in support of his nominee and of the other two gentlemen he had proposed, and claimed that there was no better temperance man in the county than himself.

Coun. J. Sullivan said fines were taken only from violators of the law. It was of no use to kick against the law. Kicking against a law was not the way to get it repealed, even though it were a bad law. It was not the sign of a good citizen to kick against and obstruct the laws of his country. If the men, who pay the fines did not violate the law they could keep the money in their pockets. This tax is not on the county but on those who sell liquor illegally. Let they look out and not violate the law if they did not want to pay the fines.
