"June-July"

June with sunshine in her eyes, Passed her hand across the skies, Then, with archly smiling lips, Blew upon her finger-tips. Soon the air grew wondrous sweet, Overhead, and under feet, Under feet, and overhead, Trooped the roses, white and red; Trooped the roses---crimson, white, Pink and yellow, pure and bright---Tiil they perfumed earth and air, Roses, roses, everywhere. Wearied then she shook her head, And the petals, white and red, All the petals---crimson, white, Pink and yellow, pale and bright, Fluttered slowly, softly down To the border of her gown. Half dismayed to see them fall, Quick she turned to leave them all, Looking back to say good-by, She met the warm glance of July. --- Anna J. Grannis.
