MANY WENT TO SUSSEX YESTERDAY

Idea of Special Train to Kitchener Memorial Service
Proved Very Popular.

Between six and seven hundred people took advantage of the opportunity afforded them yesterday to visit Sussex and take part in the memorial service which was held there in memory of Earl Kitchener, under the auspices of the 104th Battalion. The train left here at 11.15 p. m., and long before that time crowds could be seen waiting their way toward the station. Numbers of them had friends in the battalion whom they wished to see once more before they move from their present quarters which it is understood will be very soon now.

Large numbers joined the St. John contingent at the different stops along the line and when the train reached Sussex there could not have been far short of a thousand on board. The members of the 104th Band came down from Sussex last night on the special and will return on Tuesday morning as every man has to be in barracks Tuesday at noon. In this connection The Standard representative heard an interesting rumor yesterday to the effect that Bandmaster Murray Long had been given a commission, to go into effect as soon as the battalion reaches England.

Some time ago the mayor was given authority to arrange for contributions to the comfort funds of the several battalions which were quartered in St. John for the winter, and it was felt at the time that as the band of the 104th was practically a St. John organization that they should be included, and Saturday Commissioner Wigmore journeyed to Sussex and carried with him a cheque for $100, which was presented by him to the band on behalf of the city. Bandmaster Murray Long accepted the gift on behalf of the band in a neat speech in which he thanked the council for the gift and particularly for the kind spirit which prompted it. They appreciated it very much in, as an expression of the good wishes of the citizens of St. John for their welfare. The band had intended to give a farewell concert on the King Square and regretted very much that they would be unable to do so, but their first engagement when they come home would be a concert on King Square for the people of this city. They were going to do their bit, but they were hoping to come through alright and come back to their native land once more, and provide music in St. John as they had in the past.

MASONIC LODGES ATTEND ANNUAL DINNER SERVICE

Rev. J. A. MacKeigan Preached Powerful Sermon to Members of Masonic Fraternity Yesterday Afternoon.

New Brunswick Lodge together with the Grand Lodge and other city lodges of the F. and A. M. attended a special divine service at St. David's church yesterday afternoon at three o'clock.

The various lodges assembled at the Freemasons' Hall on Germain street at 2.30 from where they paraded to St. David's church, headed by the Temple band.

Mr. MacKeigan preached from the text: "Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness." "Light," said the preacher, "has been the desire of mankind in all generations. It is the cry of the infant, the quest of the student, the sob of the sufferer. Even in the brightest day the encircling gloom is never far away. There is the baffling struggle for personal power over evil, the social problem groping for solution, political vice and international strife, mysteries of pain and bewildering sorrow alike blinding us in tears. But amidst the darkness the confusion of changing standards and the crash of conflicting ideals there breaks upon the listening ear the glad message 'Unto the Upright, Light.'"

"Man thus possesses the secret of light. Stone, steel and blade straight is the key. The working standard of the Mason is the upright. In God's world there is no place for crooked walls. The test is as inevitable as the law of gravitation which weighs the plummet. If Masons are masterworkmen their lives will stand this test. The world will take knowledge of them, for though the light is imparted within it is without that it is practiced. But he whose life is crooked, kinked by vice or dwarfed by selfishness, who uses the sacred name of brotherhood for greed or gain extinguishes the brightest light of Masonry and blights its fairest flower."

"As the plumb squares with the level, so the upright man squares his life with all he meets. In public life as in his private life, man holds the key. The square is the only angle of brotherhood. It is the angle of justice without which neither cottage nor cathedral, prosperity nor peace can be established. The home built on any other basis is a misnomer. Worship of another ideal is neither acceptable to God or helpful to man. The square of honesty is the first test of worthy work and the only basis of equity between class and class. Upon it the Peace Palace of The Hague is founded and on it alone can the world be saved from the periodic wastage of war.

"Amidst the many conflicting theories of life and plans of salvation it is little wonder that some have become confused and have settled down to any easy acquiescence with all the creeds of the schools and adopted as their own the saying, 'whose life is right cannot be far wrong,' and they are right. Truth incarnate is the way of life. But the stone is kept right which is not sustained by constant communion with the Great Master and kept wholesome by a brotherhood that comprehends all of humanity. If we are to be workmen that need not be ashamed we must often retire into the Holy of Holies to study the designs upon the trestle board of eternity. This is the highest degree in Free Masonry—the exaltation and enthronement of God. No Atheist can enter its temple. Without the exaltation of God as the Sovereign Lord and Master of us all Masonry will degenerate into a mockery of brotherhood and its end as dark as its record is bright. No Mason can be negligent of the call to worship, nor deaf to the demand for service. If Masonry is to bless the deserts of sorrow and misery it must be fed from the hills of God. The ford of the Jordan warns us that while we may deceive the very guards by our appearance the password of truth must be incarnate in our lives or our accent will betray us and we shall drift down the stream of doom as did the Ephraimites of old. But unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness."

A MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR J. B. HIPWELL

Rev. R. Taylor McKim
Preached Impressive Sermon in St. Mary's Church
Last Evening.

The memorial service held in St. Mary's church last evening in commemoration of Lieut. John Basil Hipwell, who died of wounds received in the last battle of Ypres, on June 17, was largely attended. The regular English form of service was used by the curate, Rev. R. Taylor McKim.

Speaking of the gallant young hero, who has made the supreme sacrifice for his King and Country, the reverend pastor said in part:

"For the second time since the war broke out we rule the star opposite the name of one of the bravest ones in our congregation, signifying that he has answered to the last call. Lieut. John Basil Hipwell has paid the supreme sacrifice. He died that you and I might enjoy the goodly heritage of the fair land."

"For the second time in the history of St. Mary's church we gather here this evening to do honor to one of our brave lads in khaki who has died for his King and Country."

"Though I never had the pleasure of making his acquaintance," said the pastor, "yet since hearing of his death by reading only the newspapers, and by speaking with those who knew him, I have been able to form a good estimate of his character."

"He was known everywhere as Jack. Wherever he went he made friends. When the call to arms sounded throughout the length and breadth of Canada he was one of the first who responded. He did not enlist, however, without careful consideration and prayer."

"His mother told me," continued the pastor, "that he spent the whole night in prayer before he took the step. He counted the cost and he has paid in full with his own life-blood the awful price of war."

"He went as went our sires of old, across the surging seas to war. Not for the lust of fame or gold, but for the British heart before. He heard the motherland afar. Calling her children scattered wide; He went as woke the pote of war. To face the combat at his side."

"He, with the very best education obtainable, enlisted as a private in the Field Battery mobilized at Fredericton in 1914, and soon became a bombardier. His stay in England was short ere his battery was ordered to the front. There he saw much fighting and spent 15 months in the thickest of the fray. He fought through that memorable Canadian victory at Ypres."

"On two occasions," said the pastor, "he was recommended to take the officer's course, on account of his splendid ability, and gallantry on the field of action, and about two months ago he crossed over to England where he qualified as lieutenant."

"And last of all," said the pastor, "is the message for you and for me from the young officer's life. It is his thoughtfulness for others. 'Others' was the motto of his life. He enlisted not for himself but for others; he laid down his life not for himself but for others. For King and Country; for mother and father; for sister and brother; for you and for me."

"Let us not forget that," said the pastor.

The last letter written by the gallant hero before he died was read to the congregation by the pastor, after which the impressive service was closed in prayer.
