Horses in Big Demand.

Is the farmer justified in believing that the firm tone of the horse market and the present high prices for live stock rest upon a secure foundation? May he look forward with any confidence to the next season's or next year's market? Should he prepare, as against an advertised shortage and high prices for all classes of firm animals, by breeding a larger number of mares, or of cows, sheep, hogs and poultry? We are confident, says John Bright, the Live Stock Commissioner, that the farmer has never been in a more secure position than the present, as regards the extension of his breeding operations, but to enable him to form more easily his own conclusions the following facts are submitted.

Since the outbreak of the war the British Remount Commission has purchased in Canada 15,000 horses. Eight thousand have been bought by French contractors and 20,000 by the Canadian Department of Militia. The Department of Militia is now engaged in buying an additional thousand head. The British Remount Commission has purchased over 700 since March and is buying daily. French contractors are anxious to obtain supplies and are arranging to buy all that are available. Army buyers are finding it increasingly difficult, both in the United States and in Canada, to readily secure the number of horses which they require, particularly of the type suitable for heavy cavalry or heavy artillery.

In addition to the purchases for army account, 6,000 horses were sent to the West during the past three months.

Buyers report that the better class of drafters and farm chunks are getting scarce and hard to buy. The same holds true of good big roadsters and saddlers.

Song of the motorist—Keep your tail-lights burning.

The high price of cheese will no doubt encourage a revival of its manufacture. This was one of the chief industries of this part of the country some twenty to thirty years ago. Then cheese sold for as low as 6 1/2 cents; now it is over 18 cents.

Man is the only animal that eats when he is sick. If he does not want to eat, his friends and attendants, through mistaken kindness, will try to force him to eat. They think that if a patient can only eat there is some chance of his speedy recovery. The reverse is the case, for with the exception of some chronic complaints food acts as a poison to sick people and always retards recovery.

"It Isn't Your Town—It's You."

If you want to live in the kind of a town like the kind of one you'd like. You needn't slip your clothes in a grip and start on a long, long hike. You'll only find what you left behind. For there's nothing that's really new. It's a knock at yourself when you know your town. It isn't your town—it's you.

The late Mrs. Miller. The late Mrs. Henrietta Miller, widow of the late Jacob D. Miller, who predeceased her on the 3rd of October, 1901, was a resident of Newbury for nearly 40 years, coming to Newbury as a bride in the month of October, 1867. Two sons and two daughters were born, the youngest, Elizabeth, dying at the age of three and a half years. The late Mrs. Miller was the kindest of mothers, and was a good grandmother to three of her grandchildren, who were left motherless. She was a good neighbor and a sincere Christian. She lived to a ripe old age, born on the 14th of June, 1833, dying on the 21st of May, 1916, nearly 83 years old; only a slight touch of gray over her temples, the years touched her very gently, and she looked like a woman in middle life asleep in her casket.

The funeral service was conducted by her son-in-law, Rev. J. W. Hammett, B.D., at her residence on May 23rd, at 2 p.m. Mr. Hammett preached from the 12th verse of the 90th Psalm. The remains were laid to rest in the Wardville cemetery. The sons, Benjamin and George, and the daughter, Mrs. Hammett, with their children mourn the loss of a good mother. One brother, Michael Kuntz, in his 89th year, is also left to mourn the loss of a kind sister.

At Belmont John W. Chivers and his son Harry had just finished milking when lightning struck the barn, stunning Harry and knocking down a horse and cow. The hay was set on fire, but Mr. Chivers quickly extinguished it by throwing a pailful of milk over it.

BRITISH HERO A GERMAN.

Wife Learns After His Death in Battle That He Was an Alien.

A remarkable story of how a German named Leibold enlisted under the name of Baker, served for nineteen years in the British army, rose to the rank of squadron sergeant-major in the Eleventh Hussars, and died the death of a hero in France while fighting against the country of his birth is hidden behind the granting of a certificate of naturalization to his widow, Mrs. John Mowat Breadbane Baker of Godalming, Surrey. What is more remarkable is that the disclosure of Baker's German nationality surprised no one more than it did his wife.

It was not until eight months after his death that Mrs. Baker, who had been married to him since 1908, learned for the first time that her husband was a German and that she, because of her marriage, was also a German and an "alien enemy" of England.

This discovery caused the registration of Mrs. Baker under the alien restriction order, and for a time she lost her pension. Her nationality and pension, with the arrears, have been restored to her.

Last month Mrs. Baker read in a paper that a Mrs. Leibold, a German, had been prosecuted for failing to register. In the report of the case it was stated that Mrs. Leibold had come to England from Germany after her husband's death, and that she had a son, a squadron sergeant-major, who had served in the Eleventh Hussars and had been killed in action.

King's Cousin With Enemy. The suggestion has been made in the British House of Commons that the Duke of Cumberland and Albany, now fighting against Great Britain, should be removed from the British Peerage. Premier Asquith has intimated that it would be a slow process. Legislation would be necessary, he said, which the Government was not prepared to initiate at present.

This is the first intimation that the Duke of Cumberland, who is in his 71st year, is himself fighting against Britain. His son, however, is the reigning Duke of Brunswick, the Kaiser's son-in-law, and quite active against the Allies. Though the Duke of Cumberland has lived in Austria for years, and rarely visited England, he remained on the roll of the House of Lords as Duke of Cumberland and Teviotdale.

The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who is also the Duke of Albany, is the other man whom the House wishes expelled, and is also the only other foreign ruling prince who is a member of the Lords. He is a cousin of King George and was always looked upon as English in Germany, while in England he is regarded as German. He is a German by naturalization and holds general's rank in the German army. He is the son of Queen Victoria's youngest son, passed his childhood at her court, and was a schoolboy at Eton when forced, against his will, to take the throne of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, after it had been refused by the Duke of Connaught and his son, Prince Arthur.

Britain's New Colonies.

In the Pacific Isles, conquered from Germany, administrative problems are being faced with characteristic energy and thoroughness by the Australian authorities. The difficulty has been accentuated by the fact that, besides natives, who in many cases speak totally different languages, there are Chinese, Malays, and other colored races to be dealt with. The islands suffered from a drought, followed by fire, and thousands of young coconut trees were lost, and crops of sweet potatoes and other vegetables retarded. This caused some difficulty in provisioning the natives. The question of dealing with the many tropical diseases is being taken in hand, and already an improvement has been noticed. A number of Australian doctors have taken up duty in the islands. The results so far show that the methods of the Australian doctors, as regards tropical diseases, are an improvement upon those pursued by their predecessors. The natives generally appear to be well satisfied with the transfer to British rule.

Conjunction of Neighbors.

A Lancashire Fusilier sends a remarkable experience. Some time ago he was fighting in France and got wounded in the leg. He was taken to a field hospital and afterwards moved to a big hospital at the base, where, he says, he received nothing but the greatest kindness. "In fact," he states, "if I had been a blooming general I could not have received more attention. As soon as he entered this base hospital he was put to bed, and the first person he saw was his nurse, a young lady who actually lived in the next house to his own home in Lancashire. 'I did not know she was a nurse, and she did not know I had become a soldier, he declares gleefully.

Movie Records of the War.

The London War Office has made arrangements for taking cinematograph records of events of the war, both at the front and along the lines of communication in France. A number of skilled operators already have gone to the front to consult with the General Staff as to the subjects of the pictures. The War Office desires to retain the complete set of pictures for historical records and instruction. A set will eventually be placed in the British Museum.

Christian Tombs in Old Carthage.

The discovery in ancient Carthage is announced of several Christian tombs, among them a marble sarcophagus containing the body of a woman, richly adorned with jewels. The jewels included an emerald and ruby necklace, clasps of uncut precious stones, massive gold pins, buckles and rings and other ornaments of value, which were seen on the clothing of the woman.

Showing a Roof Covered with Brantford Slates in Solid Color.

There is Safety Under This Roof

Have you ever had a fine job of decorating spoiled by a leaking roof? If you have, you certainly are in a position to appreciate the value of a roof that is positively water-proof. Some of the troubles common to wooden shingles to-day are that they are apt to split, warp or blow off as well as leak, soon after they are put on. Years ago they were good, but the quality has since gradually depreciated as the available supply of suitable timber became exhausted.

Brantford Slates have none of the faults of wooden shingles. They cannot rust. They do not allow rain to be driven under them as do metal roofs. They do not require rigid supporting as do the common tile or slate roofs. On the other hand Brantford Slates afford the utmost protection with little weight. They are made on a long-fibred felt "base" which is thoroughly saturated under pressure with asphaltum or mineral pitch. Crushed quarried slate particles are then deeply embedded in the surface of this "base," making it water-tight and fireproof.

Brantford Roofing

Brantford Slates are made in the natural colors of green, red, black and grey. The colors never fade and the slates do not require painting nor repairing. These slates are pliable and fit readily around gables and into the angles of any roof. This means a continuous roof without seams or joints. Sparks die on Brantford Slates. When you have these slates "on" you are done with the job. Remember they don't require painting or staining and may be selected to harmonize with almost any exterior color design, and the price is not beyond your reach. We would be pleased to send you samples and our Roofing Booklet.
