In Lighter Vein

Near Truths.

Most men fall in love with a one-cylinder heart and a 60-h.p. imagination. Man prefers a ruxury to a necessity; that is where the extravagant woman scores.

Advice from America: Advertise. When a duck lays an egg she just waddles off as if nothing had happened. When a hen lays an egg there's a whale of a noise. The hen advertises. Hence the demand for hens' eggs instead of ducks' eggs.

No matter how many times a man has been turned down or thrown over, nothing ever shakes his beautiful, comforting theory that every single woman he meets has matrimonial designs on him.

It is hard to conceive why the comic artists continue to picture the irate father as kicking his daughter's suitor out of the door instead of in the act of falling on the deliverer's neck.

When a man has recovered from his headache he may want some more champagne, but not from the same bottle; and when he has recovered from his heartache he may want some more love, but not from the same girl.

When you hold the key to a woman's heart don't forget that she can always teach another man to pick the lock with a hairpin.—The Tatler.

Close Rub.—The steamer was on the point of leaving, and the passengers lounged on the deck and waited for the start. At length one of them espied a cyclist in the far distance, and it soon became evident that he was doing his level best to catch the boat.

Already the sailors' hands were on the gangways, and the cyclist's chance looked small indeed. Then a sportive passenger wagered a sovereign to a shilling that he would miss it. The offer was taken, and at once the deck became a scene of wild excitement.

"He'll miss it."

"No; he'll just do it."

"Come on!"

"He won't do it."

"Yes, he will. He's done it. Hurrah!"

In the very nick of time the cyclist arrived, sprang off his machine, and ran up the one gangway left.

"Cast off!" he cried.

It was the captain.—Tit-Bits.

What Could He Do?—The teacher was reading the history of England to some of the little pupils. When she came to the statement that Henry I. never laughed after the death of his son, she noticed one of the little girls had raised her hand and seemed very desirous of attracting her attention.

"Well, Amy," said teacher, "what is it?"

"Please, ma'am," said little Amy, "what did Henry I. do when he was tickled?"—Harper's Bazar.

Misnamed.—It was a party of visitors seeing the sights in Pittsburgh, that finally entered the conservatory presented to the city by Mr. Phipps. The curator, while showing them around, was called away on business and left the visitors in charge of one of the clerks. They came to a beautiful statue which was admired immensely. It was of translucent marble. He pointed out the excellences of the statue, told the name of the sculptor and showed it from every viewpoint. One asked: "Alabaster, isn't it?"

"No," he said, "Venus."—Argonaut.

The Worst Had Happened.—A man who was greatly troubled with rheumatism bought some red flannel underwear recently, which was guaranteed in every respect, and a couple of weeks later returned to the store where he made his purchase. "These flannels are not what you claimed them to be," he said to the clerk.

"What is the trouble with them?" asked the clerk, "have they faded or shrunk?"

"Faded! Shrunk!" cried the purchaser indignantly, "why, when I came down to breakfast this morning with one of them on my wife asked me: 'What are you wearing the baby's pink coral necklace for?'"
