

The Boy Went Whistling Down the Street---

THE other day a woman came from her kitchen to answer a knock at her front door. A boy gave her a telegram. The telegram told her her son was dead. He died as a result of wounds received more than two years ago.

The boy went whistling down the street.

The woman went back to her work and---grief.

This incident is told to remind you that, for many people, the war is not yet ended.

Don't you go whistling down the street. The war is not ended for you, until war incurred costs are paid. It is your duty to buy Victory Bonds to the limit of your resources.

BUY VICTORY BONDS

This Space donated to the Victory Loan 1919 Campaign by [Insert Name of Contributor here]