To-day the Brants meet the Cockneys in the Forest City, and they are confident as to the outcome. Rube has said little, but what he has said practically intimated that he did not think the Londoners could pull it off to-day. He is confident in the infield and with Higgins or Warner heaving cannot see the Brants go under. He has estimated that they are stronger this year than they ever were before. while London cannot be said to be as strong as they were last year when they made the Senators hustle.

The practice games have decided

Rube as to the make up of his team and to-day the men who will take the field will be as follows: BRANTFORD Manager, Deneau Green, 1.f. Deneau, 1b. Dunlop, s.s. Mullen, 3b. Fried 2b. LaCroix, c. Lamond, c. Worfel, p. Higgins, p.

We started on Friday and now it is Sunand there is no trench work now handy, it is all open field. That's what makes it hard for us, and I shall never forget Friday to the longest day I live, nor a good many more that came out of that battle, for I think it was the worst that has ever been in this war yet. The German big guns were going from the time we started to advance, that was at dawn, until dark, besides the machine guns, and rifles are coming at us all the time. But splendid work that day, and we are still keeping it up, although we have pretty near lost all our men. You say they called us the lucky Fourth, but guess they will call us the unlucky 4th now, for we have lost the biggest part of our battalion. They called the roll, and they figure on about 260 out of eleven hundred; that was in one day's fighting, on Friday, that was besides the English troops. I guess there was thousands put out of business that day, but we went at it like heroes, although the shells and bullets were falling all around us, the The following letter is the soldier's officers were shouting "Come on, impression of the work he has in hand.
