AN ELECTRIC ROAD

Baldoon Correspondent Argues Very Strongly For One

In the Interests of the Towaship of Dover Particularly and the Courty of Kent in tieneral.

To The Editor .- Will you kindly al low me space in your valuable paper for a few words in regard to an electric railway through Dover. I settled in Dover about 32 years ago and at that time there was plenty of mud and no roads fit to travel on, and I do not see that there has been much improvement in the roads excepting in drainage since that time. If we farmers want to go to Chatham with a load of any kind of produce we have to get up early in the morning and hurry off in order to get home before bedtime the next right, with ourselves and horses completely tired out and mud up to the ears. And I have often seen us but in for weeks at a time or account of bad roads. Now, if we had an electric road all this would be overcome. We could get to market regularly with tric road all this would be overcome. We could get to market regularly with our produce and realize something out of it. During those periods of bad roads, and that is about six months out of the year, I have seen prices of butter, eggs, vegetables, meats, etc., go up to an enormous price. When the roads would become fit to travel on at all, prices would become fit to travel on at all, prices would go down making our produce worth almost nothing on account of the rush and glut of the market. Now, if we had an electric road there would be none of this. We could take advantage of high prices, at no cost—only our fare there and back—which I think would not be more than the cost of keeping a horse all day in a there would be none of this. We could take advantage of high prices, at no cost—only our fare there and back—which I think would not be more than the cost of keeping a horse all day in a town stable. Besides, see the comfort we would have on the way. And further, if we had an electric road see further, if we had an electric road see how rapidly we could market our grain, say from 100 to 1,000 bushels per day, at a very small cost, and our teams could be kept on the farm hustling up the work. Now, my idea would be to start a road at Rordeau resorting place, have it come through Chatham city and along the front of Dover with branch lines, say to Pain Court, Mitchell's Bay and Dresden, and continue on through Dover, touching Wallaceburg, and on through Sombra and Leamington, to the other resorting burg, and on through Sombra and Leamington, to the other resorting places on the St. Clair River. I really believe if this line was completed from resort to resort there could not be cars enough put on the road to carry the passengers and freight during the summer months. Take for instance on the other side, along the St. Clair river, say from Detroit to Port Huron, There is one of the most extensive boat lines. is one of the most extensive boat lines in the world. And a short distance back from the river is a steam road running from Detroit to Port Huron. And from Detroit to Mount Clements And from Detroit to Mount Clements there is an electric road, and still they are not contented. They are looking for more conveniences. They are running an electric road along the St.

Clair river bank from Detroit to Port Huron and have it about completed. And here we are without boat line or steam road or electric road or even a half decent driving road.

1 believe all the gold in the Klondike would not make them decent driving roads. Under these circumstances there should be something done. The reason I speak of the road being built along the front of Dover township is because it would catch all the trade from Dover and the most of the trade from Chatham township. And when I's suggest running a branch to Mitchell's Bay I am certain it would get a tremendows trade from that section. Besides, Lam satisfied in my own mind that within a very short time we store. places in Western Canada. And further, if we had an electric road running through our township I consider it would add to the value of our property at least one third. Now, I think it is high time that we as farmers and citiens should spur up and encourage uch an important movement. I firmly believe we could see care running through our country to our pride and comfort. Hoping others will take this very important matter up and that we will hear from them through your very much circulated paper, and sin-cerely thanking you for your valuable

ST. VITUS CURED.

THE STORY OF A BRIGHT YOUNG GIRL'S RECOVERY.

Was First Attacked with La Grippe, the After Effects Resulting in St. Vitus' Dance - Friends Despaired of Her Recovery.

From the Acadien, Wolfville, N. S. The mails from Wolfville to Gas-pereau were carried every day by an official who is noted for his willingofficial who is noted for his wring-ness to accommodate and the punc-tuality with which he discharges his duties. His name is Mr. Merriner Cleveland and his home is in Gasper-Cleveland and his nome is in Gasper-eau, where he resides with his wife and grand-daughter, Miss Lizzie May Cleveland, a bright girl of fifteen years. A few months ago the health of their grand-daughter was a source of very great anxiety to Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, and the neighbors who learned of the physical condition of the little girl gravely shook their heads and said to themselves that the fears of the fond grand-parents were by no means groundless. When were by no means groundless. When the news reached the ears of an Aca-dien man, a short time ago, that the health of Miss Cleveland had been re-stored, he bastened to interview Mr. Cleveland as to the facts of the case. When he explained his errand both Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland appeared only too eager to give him the information sought and it is in accordance with their wishes that we give to the public the facts of this remarkable cure. EDGAR ALLEN POE.

The Truth About His Death Told By The recent dedication of a bust of the poet, Edgar Allan Poe, at the University of Virginia, has revived a widespread interest in the life story of that wonderful literary genius.

Dr. R. D'Unger, of Chicago, who takes exception to the story of Poe's death as it has been told during recent years in papers and magazines, to the effect that he was drugged to death by political "rounders," says:

"This very remarkable story relating to the death of Edgar Alian Foe, which is now going the rounds of the press, would be still more remarkable did it contain a single word of truth. I am personally acquainted with all the facts as to the demise of the poet, and will give them to you in a brief way. "The story as to his being 'cooped' by ward heelers,' drugged and . imprisoned in a room in the rear of the fire engine house on Calvert street (the old Mechanical Volunteer Fire Company had their engine house there) is preposterous, for the reason that there was no rear room in the house, the engine standing against the rear wall. Poe never had anything to do with politics, never mixed with politicians, and, besides, was not a voter in Baltimore at that or any other time, being a non-resident. "He was not a 'bum' either, and it was only men undeniably of this stamp who were 'cooped.' 'Poe was a morose, melancholy sort of fellow, his great weakness being an inclination to drink with any and every body that invited him, but I do not believe that he ever called the 'boys' up to the bar even when he had money, which was seldom. "He had an abundance of old Virginia pride, and would brace up after several drinks and be all 'fuss and feathers,' and then it was that he could and would talk eloquently. Periodical spreeing was his greatest weak-ness, and the sober intervals were regulated as to length by the state of his pocketbook--never full, to my recollection, but now and then with a fivedollar bill in it.

"The winning of the $100 prize for the 'Gold Bug' story made a fool of him. He could never stand prosperity. After getting this money he went on several small sprees, but finally on a 'great' one, as he termed it. After being intoxicated for a week he would suffer from inflammation of the stomach, and it was this complaint that carried him off, and not a poisonous

"The day after his death, or perhaps two days, the story was told in the old Baltimore Patriot office, then located on North street, above Baltimore, that Poe had been or was to be buried in Potters' field. The printers, although Poe, on account of his arro-gance, was not much of a favorite with most of them, did not relish the ides of a grave in Potters' field. A sub-scription was started, headed, if my memory serves me correctly, by Thomas Sulzer; however, the man who started the list was the foreman of the Baltimore American composing room.
"I myself was on the list for a few dollars "With the money thus raised Poe's remains were interred in the church-yard at the corner of Fayette and Greene streets. Poe did not seem to have any money, and for all we knew of the journeymen printers, whom he ever considered his inferiors, even when drinking the whiskey their money had paid for."

There will always be such a great degree of interest in the life and fate of Poe that falsehood cannot greatly hurt his fame.

At the Toy Store Window

"Pausing the other day, to look at the marvellous things exhibited in a toy store window," said Mr. Biffler, "I found myself presently more interested in the people who stopped to look, as I had done, than I was in the window itself; for to my surprise, the majority of these people were grown folks, and of these the larger number were men.

"If anybody had asked me 'Who stops to look at the things in toy store windows?' I should have said unhesita--tingly:

"'Children!"

"But here were men, bearded men, stoping to look, and looking with evi-dent interest. It couldn't be that they were already picking out Christmas presents. I imagine that women have started at that, but it is too early for men to begin at it; and so these men were just looking at the things because they wanted to. But when I come to think of it wasn't I looking at them for the same reason

"It was in a business street and at an hour when school was in, so that there could be few children here anyway; but while that might account for the propostion of men that stopped to look, they need not have stopped at all if they didn't want to, need they? And I couldn't help thinking that the man who preserved an interest in these boyish, youthful things, who liked to look in, and think of the things he used to have, must have had happy days, however old he may be, or however fortune has treated him, for he is younghearted still.

There is a good deal of point in a little story that I read in French the other day—a point that pricks American men of the class who have their own houses, as well as Frenchmen. A man is getting himself up a new house and he and his wife are considering plans. One of these plans is favored by the wife

"Well, I should like this plan very well," says the husband, "but I don't quite see where I am going to get myself in a stuly." "A study!" exclaimed the wife. "What do you want of a study? You don't smoke!"

"Maud, didn't you pay more for your new cloak than you said you would?" "No, Harry: I had the extra $10 charged to you.
