

JAPANESE ARRIVALS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

The Japanese Consul in Vancouver Says the Mikado is Observing Lameux Agreement, but Newspaper Thinks Otherwise—re Passports Used a Second Time?

Vancouver, June 12.—Commenting on the recent publication in a Japanese newspaper, the Nichi Nichi, which stated that the Japanese government never agreed to restrict immigration to Canada under the Lemieux understanding to four hundred per annum, Hon. C. Yada, the Japanese consul here, today said: "The newspaper has plainly been misinformed about this matter. At the time of the Lemieux arrangement was negotiated, the Japanese government expressed the belief that the number to whom passage permits would be issued would not exceed four hundred per annum. I am quite sure that the newcomers from Japan have not reached the maximum figure, exclusive of the Japanese who formerly resided in Canada, and have returned from visits to Japan. The classes designated in the Lemieux arrangement were domestic servants and agriculturalists. The international understanding does not apply to Japanese tourists, merchants or students who are free to come and go as they will. Japan is faithfully observing her obligation."

On the other hand, The Province newspaper says to-day: "The Lemieux understanding is already a thing of shreds. Its provisions have been violated with the most barefaced bravado. No less than six hundred and eight subjects of the Mikado have entered British Columbia in the five months of this year ending with May 31st." The newspaper quoted the list of steamers with the number of Japanese on each and continues: "It is an open secret that a large illicit traffic in passports is being directed here from Osaka. One Japanese family grant in the regular four hundred lands here, his passport is sold a month later, and returned to do service of bringing in another country man."

CRAWLED THREE MILES.

Wonderful Pluck of Injured Man on Mountainside.

London, June 11.—After the terrible experience of spending two nights on the side of a mountain in the Snow

Dr. Hahn, who hails from Berlin, left the Penysgwyrd Hotel, Llanberis, on the morning of the disappearance, intending to climb one of the heights in the vicinity, but he did not inform anyone of his plans. He was seen to leave the hotel at 10.30 a.m. and he was not seen again. He did not engage a guide. He did not return that night, and his alibi was not substantiated. He was not noticed, but as he did not put in an appearance on the following day he was reported missing. On the Tuesday morning the missing man was found in a state of extreme exhaustion.

Dr. Hahn told a wonderful story of luck and resource. "I scaled the mountain for a considerable distance," he said, "and I was able to find a dense fog, and to make matters worse an unlucky fall on the rugged path and I was left in a state of complete unconsciousness for how long I do not know—and I remained on the mountain for several days with cold and blinded eyes and aching limbs."

ously, at for two nights and a day they were my sole companions.

"I thought I would make an attempt somehow to descend. I had a stool with me, and I broke it up into three pieces, and used two of them as splints for my fractured leg, and then I began my descent. But I was like a dead weight, and was compelled to stop and rest close to a huge chasm where one of the searchers saw my waving hands.

"I had only a few bars of chocolate to sustain me during my pilgrimage.

Altogether Herr Hahn must have crawled over three miles.

THE PARISIAN OPIUM DEN.

Paris, June 11.—An exceedingly vigorous campaign is being conducted by the detective department for the suppression of the various opium dens which exist in Paris. The campaign has been the result of the recent death of a young nobleman in one of these haunts.

The 'dens,' most of which are in the fashionable district of Paris, are often luxuriously furnished flats. The owners personally loan to the hostess or her close acquaintances, are admitted to the use of the flat, where not only opium smoking, but chlorodyne drinking and chloral injections, which are now in fashion, are a part of the entertainment. The depraved persons, are carried off.

Owing to the great secrecy in which the opium smokers meet, it is exceedingly difficult to locate the dens.

Case of False Arrest.

Vancouver, June 11.—W. Pollock, of Albany, Ore., was arrested this afternoon on the arrival by the C.P.R. of the false supposition that he was a "wanted" named Morgan. He was identified by the Metropolitan bureau driver, but in spite of his protestations, was carried off to jail by the detectives. He was later released when again identified by a prominent citizen. He answered the description of Morgan in his clothes, but not in his person.
