A SUGGESTION TO NEUTRALS.

LONDON, Oct. 14.

Neutral nations are offered the suggestion that they use the German ships interned in their ports to compensate them for submarine losses, by the shipping correspondent of the Times. Discussing the world shortage in tonnage, the correspondent says: In view of the continued wanton destruction of neutral shipping, Pritish owners are wondering how much longer neutral countries are going to allow German vessels to be idle in their ports. After stating that there are ninety German ships in Chilean harbors, the correspondent continued: While like all neutrals she is suffering from lack of tonnage, therefore, in view of British shipowners, Chile, if she will not use these ships to export her produce to Euships to export her produce to Europe, will be asked to lease them t a power which can employ them an which will indemnify her for loss i port and harbor charges.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

Possibly, the feature of incandescent gas lighting most frequently noted by casual observers is the great ease with which tasks, ordinarily arduous under artificial light may be performed under the Welsbach gas mantle. The light has a peculiarly "soft" quality, difficult to describe, but which is readily recognized by those who have had experience with the gas mantle lamp.

In its general effect upon bodily health and comfort, the use of incandescent gas lighting is decidedly favorable. The currents of air set up by the burning gas improves ventilation, tending to expel the air vitiated by respiration and draw in fresh air to replace it. Harmful or dangerous disease germs are instantly destroyed in the flame. The extent to which this effect takes place may be verified by placing a gas lamp close to a ceiling without any provision for interfering with the up-rushing air currents. The charred particles which collect immediately above the lamp are the remains of dust particles which before passing through the flames were laden with germs and microbes. Actual experiments have shown that the burning of gas lamps in rooms previously. burning of gas lamps in rooms previ-ously containing bacteria, resulted in absolute sterilization of the air.

Contrary to the popular notion the temperature of rooms lighted by incandescent gas lamps is seldom markedly greater than under incandescent electric light, even under unfavorable conditions of ventilation, while in rooms provided with the ventilating facilities required by the demands of hygiene, the temperature in gas-light. hygiene, the temperature in gas-light-ed rooms is frequently lower.
