Russian Pendulum Swings Back

MOSCOW, (Associated Press)-The dulum of the Russian Soviet clock is swinging, this winter, as far to the right as it once swung to the left, but the Communist party keeps the key to the works and accelerates its movements or retards them as it sees fit. From a country where, one year ago, private wealth was considered a crime prohibition of liquor was a state policy and gambling was sometimes punishable by death, Russia has changed to a land of open speculation, where people drink wine legally and openly, and bet on horse-racing by means of betting machines from which the government takes a profit. These are just a few of the changes since the Kronstadt revolt last March prompted Premier Lenine to inaugurate a new policy. In moving toward a state of capitalism, the government, since the Ninth All-Russian Soviet congress closed a few months ago with approval of Lenine's plans, has taken surgical short cuts in an effort to change within a few months the conditions prevalent for years.

NEW SURPRISES DAILY.

Moscow awakes each morning to a new surprise. It seems only yesterday that private banks were prohibited. Today, a few strokes of the pen of the Commissar of Finance, and private banks may operate at every corner. Yesterday, hearding of gold was a punishable offense. To-day, another decree and trading in it, making jewels of it, or anything one could want to do with it are legalized. "Radical cures for radical diseases" seems to be the government rule. A dezen sessions of the Congress of the United States couldn't accomplish the alterations made daily in the life of a Muscevite by the busy scribbling of the 17 pens of Russia's 17 commissars.

When Was Rouge First Used?

Rouge itself has not been in use for very long, but people have "reddened" themselves from the dawn of history. Short lengths of hollow bone, stained with a kind of red earth, have been discovered in the ancient dwellings of cavemen. And all through history we find references to the use of "raddle" or "ruddle"—the red stuff with which modern farmers mark their sheep. The ancient Egyptians used it, so did the Eburians before the days of Rome.

In the sixteenth century men and women alike "raddled" openly, and the colouring was obvious and exaggerated. In the days of Queen Anne, an additional "beautifier" was introduced in the "beauty spot."

A few years later the carefully prepared cosmetic from sullflower or carmine, now called rouge, was introduced, at first in France, and later in

Its use to-day is greatly modified, for while even half a century ago great ladies, and occasionally great men, rouged ostentatiously (for instance, the famous Lord Beaconsfield). the modern art of rouging is to conceal the art!

History in the Making.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY NAU-TICAL RELICS.

LONDON .- Remnants of a wreck believed to date back to a Dutch-Spanish battle in 1641 have been brought to the surface by salvage workers in Lerwick harbor. Four ancient cannon, each seven feet long with a threeinch bore, have been salved and these have been supplemented by massive oak timbers, which are in a good state of preservation. It is believed that the wreck is that of a Dutch warship which, with three East Indiamen, was attacked by 10 armed ships of Dunkirk (then Spanish), in Bressay Sound, on June 13, 1641, After a flerce engagement, two of the Indians were sunk and the third escaped, while the Dutch warship was compelled to sur-

Disliked Fish.

Harry Taup's aversion to fish was blamed by his wife, Clara, for the marital smash resulting in a divorce case which Judge Carr heard in Circutt Court, Detroit, on March 20. Mrs. Taup testified that her husband came home, found that she had fish for dinner, and spoiled it for the entire family by pouring kerosene over it. This act. the wife contended in her bill, constituted extreme-cruelty.
