"A Question of Honor"

A Ruth Cross Novel from the People's Home Journal. Directed by Edwin Carew. Anita Stewart is called upon to do a number of things and does them all superbly. She rides, swims, shoots and neatly frustrates the schemes of a group of unscrupulous financiers. In addition she is given opportunity of wearing a variety of costumes from riding habit to evening gown. Produced in 8 Big Acts. A FIRST NATIONAL ATTRACTION.

Catch Them Young.

THE BEST OF THINGS.

Youngsters from the start, it is not mean to be careful, that is, to be careful of their health and untidiness are the things to be ashamed of.

One of the things that is natural to the young is to be natural. It is not mean to be natural, on hearing it said, replied that he would much rather hear his countrymen laugh at him than see his people weep at his extravagance.

For the very reason that it is more natural to be natural than to be artificial, as when we are doing right, only foolish people confuse us with meanness. Thrift, says a writer, means making the most of everything, and above all, it gives a moral character, and enables it to resist many temptations.

Don't allow your children to waste your goods or the property of others, who willfully damage paint, woodwork, windows, but to explain to them to refrain from such things is a part of self-respect, and will save them from much trouble and even shame, when they are older.

Eyes And How to Keep Them.

Never fail to give them a good douching with cold water, either plain or slightly salted, every morning of their lives.

Never make them read books or papers when travelling inside a car or on top of motor buses, unless the print happens to be very big, and then it is not a wise habit.

Never wear pince-nez for reading or working when spectacles can be obtained. The latter do not irritate the eyes by wobbling as do the former.

Never, never read by a bad light, especially by the light of a fire.

Never fail to consult an oculist when the eyes become tired or ache frequently, and never forget to wear the glasses which he prescribes.

Never make the eyes stare at dark or white needlework in a bad artificial light.

Never, unless it is absolutely unavoidable, compel two little eyes to keep open after 10.30 at night.

Bending of Light.

EINSTEIN THEORY UPHOLD BY ECLIPSE PHOTOGRAPHS.

Professor Chant, of Toronto University, asserts that the observations of the Canadian party of the eclipse of the sun at Wallat on September 21 last prove distinctly favourable to Professor Einstein's theory of the bending of light rays.

More than 30 stars have been recognized on the photographic plates which were exposed. The actual displacements on the plates ranged from 1-1500 to 1-8000 of an inch. Professor Chant says: "The fact that there is displacement is quite certain and its amount appears to be approximately that which Professor Einstein predicted."

Cuticura Soap Will Help You Clear Your Skin

Don't let your skin become a source of trouble. Cuticura Soap will help you clear your skin.

Just Folks.

BY EDGAR A. GUEST.

A BIT OF MAN IN THE BOY.
There's a bit of man in the boy, I say
A bit of man in the boy.
You can catch a glimpse of the far-away
And a look at the future joy;
Whether yours or mine, you can surely
see.
A hint of the man that he's going to be.
Out of his laughter and out of his tears.
Out of the game he plays,
There flashes a glimpse of the future years.
There you can mark his ways.
The bad predicts what the blossom will be.
And a hint of the man in the boy you
see.

You may think him a boy as you come and go.
A boy who walks with you,
A glad little fellow with eyes aglow.
But a man is walking too.
Yes, father and son, you are really three—
You and the boy and the man he'll be.

Insanity Not

Worst Menace.

The increase in insanity is not merely so lasting a measure to civilization as the rapid increase of sub-normal intelligence, in the opinion of Professor R. M. Wenley, of Michigan University. Insanity statistics did not go far enough back, he pointed out recently, to allow of a good comparison with previous periods of extreme mental strain, but the tendency of modern industrial conditions to foster sub-normal intelligence was a new thing, and a serious factor in the future outlook of society. The automatic tool, in the use of which a man had only to repeat continuously one movement to supplement the action of the machine, had done and was doing much to perpetuate the under-developed mentality, and in many industrial establishments it had been demonstrated that the man of under-developed intelligence performed these tasks better than the man of higher intellectual attainments. A man to be less intelligent than the normal to be really good at these almost mechanical jobs. In one big industrial establishment in the States, it had been found that 80 per cent. of the staff could learn their jobs in 24 hours. Then they went on for the rest of their lives repeating that one day's lesson.

Spring-Cleaning

Paintwork.

Any soda in water used for cleaning paintwork dissolves the paint. The water should only be moderately warm, and if soap is needed, it should be ordinary yellow household soap and a little should be rubbed on a linen cloth. Do a small piece at a time and do not allow any water to trickle down, as this leaves marks. For very good light paint, whitening paste is really better than soap, but the whitening must be well precipitated before use, otherwise it will be gritty and injure the paint.

Never use a scrubbing brush to paint-work, and do not have cloths made of wool, as bits of the woolen fibre will be left on the paint afterwards.

To clean painted woodwork which is dark in color, one of the best things is potato water, obtained by grating six large potatoes into a couple of quarts of water, and leaving this to stand. It should, of course be strained before applying it.

For very dark paint use paraffin, but very sparingly, and rub it off well. It is a splendid color refresher. Highly-varnished paint should be cleaned as little as possible. When it is necessary to do so dissolve a dessertspoonful of borax in boiling water, and use this when quite cool. Dry well and polish with a leather.

10,000 Pound

Bank Trick.

Two Marseilles bank clerks were robbed of £10,000 by a clever rascal a few weeks ago.

They were paying in the money at the Bank of France, one man making out the paying-in slip, while the other watched the package of money, which he had placed on the counter.

A stranger spoke to the latter, and pointing to two 50-franc notes on the floor, said, "Do these belong to you?"

The clerk, thinking he must have dropped them, bent down to pick up the notes. At the same moment the stranger substituted for package of money on the counter a parcel which, when it was opened, was found to contain old newspapers.

By that time the obliging stranger had vanished.

THE GENUINE ARTICLE.

If everybody were optimists and backed up their convictions with well directed hard work the howl for an equal division of wealth would soon die out.
