ask for a warrant, what can you do to keep me quiet?"
Suddenly the virago stopped as though she were shot, and her fierce countenance froze into an appearance of terror, as well it might. Mr. Quest, who had been sitting listening to her with his hand over his eyes, had risen, and his face was as the face of a fiend, alight with an intense and quiet fury which seemed to be burning inwardly. On the mantlepiece lay a sharp pointed Goorka knife, which one of Mrs. D'Aubig a's admirers, who had traveled, had presented to her. It was an awful looking weapon, and keen edged as a razor. This he had taken up and held in his right hand, and with it he was advancing toward her lying on the sofa.

"If you make a sound I will kill you at nce," he said, speaking in a low and husky voice.

She had been paralyzed with terror, for like most bullies, male and female, she was a great coward, but the sound of his voice roused her, and the first note of a harsh screech had already issued from her lips, when he sprang upon her, and placing the sharp point of the knife against her throat, pricked her with it. "Be quiet," he said, "for you are a dead woman."

She stopped screaming, and lay there, her face twitching, and her eyes bright with terror.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.

"Now, listen," he said, in the same husky voice. You incarnate fiend, you asked me just now how I could keep you quiet, I will tell you; I could keep you quiet by running this knife up to the hilt in your throat," and once more he pricked her with its point. "It would be murder," he went on, "but I do not care for that. You and others between you have not made my life so pleasant for me that I am especially anxious to preserve it. Now listen, I will give you £350 that I have brought, and you shall have the £250 a year; but if you ever attempt to extort more, or if you molest me, either by spreading stories against my character or by means of legal prosecution, or in any other way, I swear by the Almighty that I will murder you. I may have to kill myself afterward—I don't care if I do, provided I kill you first. Do you understand me, you tiger, as you call yourself? If I have to hunt you down as they do tigers, I will come up with you at last, and kill you. You have driven me to it, and, by heaven! I will. Come, speak up and tell me that you understand, or I may change my mind and do it now," and once more he touched her with the knife.

She rolled off the sofa on to the floor and lay there writhing in abject terror, looking in the shadow of the table, where her long, the same in the shadow of the table, where her long, the same hasd Children, she gave them Castoria. She rolled off the sofa on to the floor and lay there writhing in abject terror, looking in the shadow of the table, where her long, lithe form was twisting about in its robe of yellow, barred with black, more like one of the great eats from which she took her name than a human being. "Spare me!" she gasped; "spare me! I don't want to die. I swear that I will never meddle with you again."

She tried to rise, but her knees would not support her, so she sat upon the floor.

"Now," said Mr. Quest, replacing the knife on the mantlepiece, "here is your money," and he flung a bag of notes and gold into her lap at which she clutched eagerly and almost automatically. "The £250 will be paid on the first of January in geach year, and not one farthing more will you get from me. Remember what I tell you; try to molest me by word or act and you are a dead woman; I forbid you even to write to me. Now go to the devil in your tow rite to me. Now go to the devil in your own way," and without another word he took up his hat and umbrella, walked to the door, unlocked it, and went, leaving the Tiger huddled together on the floor.

For half an hour or more the woman remained thus, the bag of money in her hand. Then she struggled to her feet, her face livid and her body shaking.

"Ugh," she said, "I'm as weak as a "Ugh," she said, "I'm as weak as a "Ugh," she said, "I'm as weak as a "I cat. I thought he meant to do it that time, and he will, too, for 6d. He's me there. I am afraid to die. I can't bear to die. It is better to lose the money than to die. Beside, if I blow on him he'll put me in chokey and I shan't be able to get anything out of him, and when he comes out he'll do for me." And then losing her temper, she shook her fist in the air, and broke out into a flood of language such as would neither be pretty to hear nor good to repeat. to repeat.

Mr. Quest was a man of judgment. At last he had realized that in one way, and one only, can a wild beast be tamed, and that to by terror. - ... CHAPTER XVII.

WEAT SOME HAVE FOUND SO SWEET."

Meanwhile things at the castle were going pleasantly for everybody. The Squrre was as happy attending to the various details connected with the transfer of the mortgages as though he had been lending £30,000 instead of borrowing it. The great George was happy in the unaccustomed flow of borrowed cash, that enabled him to treat Janter with a lofty scorm not unmingled with pity, which was as balm to his harassed soul, and also to transact an enormous amount of business in his own peculiar way with men up trees and otherwise; for had he not to stock the Moat farm, and was not Michaelmas at hand?

Mr. Job Scales, of Toronto, writes: A short time ago I was suffering from Kidney Complaint and Dyspepsia, sour stomach and lame back; in fact, I was completely prostrated and suffering intense pain. While in this state a friend recommended me to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. I used one bottle, and the permanent manner in which it has cured and made a new man of me is such that I cannot withhold from the proprietors this expression of my gratitude."

"Hair Magic"

Is a good name of Dr. Dorenwend's German preparation for the hair. It really works like magic. All who have used it pronounce it to be unequaled for remedying the lot-t vitality of the hair roots, restoring gray hair, removing dandruff, etc. Just try it. It is first-class.
