THE WORK OF CLODBURST 4,000 PEOPLE HOMELESS

Seventy-Five Bodies Unearthed in a New Jersey Cemetery.

Train Derailed on the N. Y. Central as Result of a Washout.

Madison, N. J., Aug. 11.—The cloudburst last night caused devastation in Hillsdale cemetery. About 75 caskets were uncovered by the rushing waters, and many of them were swept from the graves in which they had lain. The cemetery is situated partly on a hill, but a brook and ravine traverse the other portion of it. The water backed up and swept across the lower part of the cemetery. For a distance of about 400 feet the torrent carried everything before it, and for a width of 50 feet the graves were washed out.

Today coffins were found strewn about in all directions. Some of the bodies were found a mile from the cemetery, and it is believed others were washed into the Passaic River. Up to 10:30 o'clock 40 bodies had been recovered.

DERAILED A TRAIN.

New York, Aug. 11.—A southbound passenger train on the Harlem division of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad was derailed at Pawling station, and according to reports received by the railroad officials here eight persons were injured. The accident is said to have been caused by the track being washed out by a cloudburst. Four coaches left the rails. The train left Chatham, N. Y., at 8 a.m.

BOUND TO PASS EDUCATION BILL

In Spite of Opposition Before Christmas.

LICENSING BILL HITS CLUBS

Comte Henri de la Vault's Ballooning Record—675 Kilometers in 19 Hours.

London, Aug. 11.—The great event of Saturday's session naturally has been preceded by the prorogation of Parliament, but the education bill, unless it perishes by its own weight, has to be passed. For that purpose Parliament, which began to sit in the middle of January, will resume its labors in the middle of October. Mr. Balfour, with the colloquial looseness which, in a prime minister may be called inaccuracy, talks about an autumn session. A real autumn session would take up all the time that there should be no payment of bills. The education bill, for example, would have to be brought in again. At an autumn sitting it will be taken up just where it was left. The Government has staked its reputation, if not its existence, on passing it before Christmas.

Clause seven, upon which too much time and energy have been expended, stands in the middle of the bill. It is, in fact, the central point of the measure, for it deals with the management of denominational schools upon which Tory churchmen and Irish Nationalists are determined there shall be no surrender.

THE OPPOSITION.

The Nonconformists and Liberal churchmen are bound by their principle and pledges to make a firm stand on the rational and intelligible principle that there should be no payment of local rates without local control. The Bishop of Hereford, a broad-minded, enlightened prelate, continues to urge in the volume of the Times his practical judicious compromise. He would have the board of management equally composed of representatives from the council, the trustees, the representatives of the parish, and the council of trustees in proportion of one-third to each, but the church militant will not hear of this.

THE LICENSING BILL.

The home secretary, Mr. Ritchie, has carried his licensing bill, and for that the Government reserves some credit, for though a small and modest proposal, it is sensible, practical and in the right direction. It aims a blow at drinking clubs, which, had as the worst public nuisance, are at present beyond the control of the police.

While attempts, more or less desperate, are being made to explain away the Liberal vote in North Leeds, the unopposed return of Mr. Shackleton for the Clitheroe division of Lancashire has attracted less notice than it deserves. The late member for Clitheroe, now Lord Shaftesbury, has always been a moderate, though devoted Liberal. Mr. Shackleton belongs to the Independent Labor party, of which Mr. Keir Hardie has hitherto been the only spokesman in the House of Commons. It is highly desirable that the working classes should be personally acquainted with the members who represent them in the Commons, but Mr. Shackleton is not merely a working man. He is an advanced socialist, and his unorthodox constitutionally, regarded as a striking sign of the times.

KING OSCAR A LIFESAVER.

A dispatch received from Stockholm reports that King Oscar has enacted the role of lifesaver. His majesty was yachting near Stockholm, when the Mastrand bridge, which was crowded with women and children, collapsed, and a large number fell into the water. The king dived his coat and aided in the rescue of 23 persons, who were placed aboard the royal yacht.

THE KING'S TENDERS.

Fourteen hundred adults and 600 children, tenants of the King's Sandringham estate, were entertained at dinner and tea as guests of his majesty Saturday.

A TRUCE.

The Colombian minister has received a cablegram from the Governor of Panama briefly informing him that hostilities between the two contending parties of the rebellion have ceased for the present and that a truce has been established.

KING HAD TO DECLINE.

One of the principal breeders of Russian cattle, Prince Gakoff, the Czar's chief, who is the possessor of a fine herd of pure British bulls and of their progeny crossed with Culmuck stock, has asked the King's acceptance of a number of purchased Culmuck cattle. Acknowledging this offer, Lord Knollys, on behalf of his majesty, thanks the prince, but regrets that the King is unable to accept the proposed gift owing to law prohibiting the importation of foreign cattle.

RECORD BALLOON TRIP.

Comte Henri de la Vault has made a balloon ascent in the Aerobul No. 2, from St. Cloud, Paris, and landed safely at Opoes, near Geldhausen, Hesse, having covered 675 kilometers in nineteen hours. This is the aerial record for 1902, the world's record for a prize founded by Comte de Saint Victor; namely 1,000 (2000) for 1,000 kilometers, and 2,000 (4000) for the world's record, 1,922 kilometers.

SWAM IN SCALDING WATER

James Carr Killed in Trying to Save His Friend.

Heroic Lad's Fearful Sufferings—First Thought Was for Companion.

Cincinnati, Aug. 12.—In a heroic effort to save a companion from being boiled alive, 16-year-old James Carr, of No. 142 Rector street, Manayunk, lost his life, while his friend, Jos. Garforth, was rescued. The two boys were in the canal bank, below Rector street, Manayunk. During the dinner hour the two, along with other employees, started to play ball. The canal bank, near by was a large tank, 15 feet long, 6 feet deep and about 4 feet in width, sunk in the ground to within a foot of the surface. The water in the tank, heated steam and water from the mill engines, the water being at a temperature of about 200 degrees.

KILLED IN BY HIS FRIEND.

Garforth in trying to catch the ball, stumbled over the portion of the tank above ground, and fell backward into three feet of water. Carr, who saw his mishap, ran to his rescue. In reaching down into the tank Carr lost his balance and fell in on top of his friend. Thinking that Garforth was dead, Carr, who was, Carr, although suffering excruciating pain, immediately struck out, and swam around in the tank, managing to keep Garforth's head above water.

The agonizing cries of the two attracted the other players, who hurried to their rescue. The boys were pulled out after being in the boiling water fully three minutes, and hurried to St. Timothy's Hospital. Carr was parboiled from head to foot, while Garforth was badly scalded over his entire body, except the head.

"WILL JOE DIE?"

While on the operating table Carr seemed to forget his own sufferings, and kept asking after his companion, believing he was in a more serious condition than himself. Carr died at 7 o'clock, his last words being, "Will Joe die?"

Young Carr, who was a son of James P. Carr, sexton of St. John's Cathedral, was a member of the parochial school last June, and was working in the mill during his vacation to earn money so that he could enter St. Joseph's College in the fall.

$10,000 FOR BABY'S HAND

Damages Paid by the North Jersey Traction Co. After Long Fight.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 12.—After a stubborn fight for nearly three years, the North Jersey Traction Company paid $10,000 yesterday for the loss of a baby's hand.

On July 8, 1899, Ida Herlich, then 2½ years old, toppled from a seat on an open trolley car at Market and Broad streets, and the wheel shaved her hand off at the wrist.

The child was sitting with her mother and occupied the outside seat. This was regarded as negligence upon the part of the parent, and while the jury in the circuit court awarded a verdict of $10,000, the company regarded it as excessive, and carried the case to the supreme court, where the judgment was set aside. Lawyer George M. Thus, counsel for the child's parents, carried the case to the court of errors and appeals, and after a hard fight the judgment was reinstated. The money will be held in trust for the child by her parents until she is of age.

Your step has lost elasticity because your blood has lost vitality, which Blood's Sarsaparilla will restore.

BLOEMFONTEIN'S BURGOMASTER

Testifies to the High Standing of British Officers.

ASTONISHED THE BERLINERS

The Men in Khaki Neither Brutes, Bears Nor Bullies—The Future of South Africa.

Berlin, Aug. 12.—Dr. Kellner, the former burgomaster of Bloemfontein, who is a native of Charlottenburg, is spending a few days in Berlin. He has greatly astonished a German interviewer by the favorable nature of his testimony regarding the character of British officers and British warfare.

Dr. Kellner started the conversation by observing that his sympathies were entirely with the Boers when the war broke out. He proceeded as follows: "I had previously warned them most seriously regarding the war, but they would not listen to me, for they were firmly convinced they would defeat the British. Mr. Brand, who was an excellent president of the Orange Free State, clearly foresaw the direction that affairs would take. On his deathbed he spoke to me the memorable words: 'The Boers desire to consolidate South Africa into one state. Well, it will be welded into one state, but only under British rule. Then South Africa will break away from British rule, just as did the North American colonies.'"

"The first portion of this prophecy has been fulfilled. Will South Africa one day become independent? I imagine that things there will shape themselves much as they have done in Australia."

KRUGER AND STEYN.

Dr. Kellner proceeded at the interviewer's request to give his opinion of the most prominent personalities in the war. He declared that Mr. Steyn was "not a wise man." He had allowed himself to be completely dominated by Mr. Kruger. His friends regarded that as a virtue, and said, "Kruger and Steyn fit it like cap and head."

"Most true," his opponents were accustomed to rejoin, "but Kruger is the head and Steyn is the cap."

Of Mr. Kruger himself, Dr. Kellner said that he was a stubborn man, who desired to remain president at all the risks. He had remained president and South Africa have retained its independence, if he had followed Mr. Cecil Rhodes' advice.

GERMAN SLANDERS.

The interviewer asked if the German reports regarding cruelty of British warfare were correct.

"The British, as I have learned to know them, was the answer, 'are gentlemen.' It stands to reason that the nation which rules the world must be a noble nation."

Dr. Kellner, the former burgomaster, described the proceedings of Lord Roberts, "A distinguished gentleman from head to foot," and of the army at and after the battle of Mafeking. He added that the promise made by Lord Roberts that the city should suffer no damage was most faithfully fulfilled.

The interviewer next tried his fortune with the concentration camps, and was told that unusually cold weather was the main cause of the large percentage of disease. The sympathy of the British with the miseries of the Boer inhabitants of the camps, and their ultimately successful efforts to relieve them, were also mentioned.

BEGINNING AND END.

In regard to the origin of the war, Dr. Kellner declared that its immediate causes were to be found in the animosities aroused by the agitation of the Boer under Mr. Schreiner and Mr. Hofmeyr, who induced the Republican Boers to hostilities, while remaining themselves secure from all personal risk. The result of the war was never doubted, after the appearance of Lord Roberts on the scene.

"Do you mean to say," asked the astonished interviewer, "that the Boers were absolutely forced to conclude peace?"

"I do," was the reply. "The appearance of individual Boers towards the close of the struggle showed that the Boers were getting into a desperate condition. The prisoners brought in offered a terrible picture, with their ragged clothing and their emaciated figures. Food and ammunition were exhausted. Hunted from all sides, they were compelled to conclude peace. The game was up."

PROSPEROUS FUTURE.

The interviewer next asked if the result of the war would be beneficial to the annexed states. "Most certainly," Dr. Kellner responded, "for freedom and progress are with Great Britain. All British colonies prosper, and the Transvaal and the Orange Colony are approaching a prosperous future. I could already see several of my rates at a higher price than they would have fetched five years ago, but I shall not realize, for they will become still more valuable with time."

"Will it surprise you to hear," Dr. Kellner concluded, "that before the war Dewet, whose military genius excites our unstinted admiration, became a party in the Volksraad which, because it contested all reform, was known as the 'skid' Dewet opposed the construction of railways in the Orange Free State with all his force. Railways, he said, meant the influx of foreigners and British. What a contrast is here furnished with the new government, which is thinking of expending 30,000,000 marks on the development of our railway net! Yes, the new government is right. We hope that a period of renewed happiness is dawning for the Boers."

The foregoing interview, which might have been a German illustration, was published on Saturday in the Lokalanzeiger. With one exception the Berlin evening papers have carefully refrained from reproducing it.
