"CHARLES S. PRICE" OVERTURNED

Diver Establishes Identity of the Boat Floating Near for one performance. Seat sale opens Point Edward-Found No Vessel Under and Does Not Believe Any Collision Occurred.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Sarnia, Ont., Nov. 16.—The mystery surrounding the overturned hull in Lake Huron was solved yesterday by Submarine Diver Wm. H. Baker, of 289 Riopelle street, Detroit, who went out with Captain Robert Thompson, of the Thompson Towing Company,

Port Huron, on the tug Spot The investigation proved that the opinion that the boat was the Charles S. Price is correct. The result of the finding is that there is no boat under the Price, as the anchor of the Sport was purposely dragged all around the the story of William H. Baker, the diver, as told to reporters an hour after leaving the scene of the wreck with the secret of the boat's name finally secured from the water: We lay near the wreck all night on the tug Sport, waiting for the dawn of morning, and had everything arranged to make the descent at the earliest possible moment.

"I was ready at 5:30 and at 6 o'clock I had started down. The tug was anchored with her bow pointing about northwest, parallel with the wreck, and the stern of the tug was about abreast of the bluff at the steamer's bow. We threw a line to which was attached about 100 pounds of scrap-tron over the wreck to keep the stern as close as possible to the wreck. We were on the starboard side of the wreck. As I started down I felt ides all the way down for 20 feet. Lost It Again.

I hung on there until I found out where I was at. Then I went down that pipe-rail until I ran into the bulwarks of the wreck. The bulwarks were painted white. There was a sound railing on the edge of the bul-warks, and I went around that railing until I ran across her name.

Read Her Name Twice.

"There I stopped and took my time. I read her name twice and the letters spelled out for me 'Charles S. Price'her full name is there. I read the name over twice to be absolutely positive. The name is painted in black letters on white bulwarks. "After making sure that the name

Captain's View.

Captain Robert P. Thompson, owner f the tug Sport, stated: "There has been so much anxiety over the name of the mystery ship that I decided that if it was possible to get it, now was the time. We laid near the wreck all night and had everything in readiness for the attempt to lower the diver at 5:30 o'clock BODY OF C. JONES this morning. At 6 o'clock Mr. Baker went over the stern of the tug Sport in an effort to get the name of the boat. With the assistance of Peter Bachus, one of the most expert diver attendants on the lake's, who was on board to take care of Mr. Baker, we owered him over the stern of the boat. The United States Government has ordered the revenue cutter Morrill back to guard the floating wreck in Lake Huron. A gas buoy was placed near the wreck tonight. The wreck was reported by passing steamers today to be still sinking slowly.

For first half of this week, beginning onight, with matinee Wednesday, the Marks Brothers' Company will afford amusement to the theatre-going public at popular prices at the Grand Opera House. The Marks Company is easily one of the best repertoire companies on the road, and the strong list of plays advertised show that they are able to give the public as good if not better than any other. Besides the regular performance some specialties will be presented, and there is absolutely no waits between the acts, there being something doing all the time. Marks Company carry no less than five distinct specialties. The plays tonight, "The Convict's Sweetheart" tomorrow, "Wife in Name Only" Wednesday matinee, "Lena Rivers", Wednesday night, "Dora Thorne."

Two of the World's Famous Stars. Mme. Polaire, the daring French artist, who is at present starring with Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, will present a vivid dramatic document, in one act, entitled "Le Visiteur," which was written for her by Georges Bard, director of the Vaudethe piece prepared especially for this tour, and aside from six weeks at the Vaudeville Theatre, Paris, has never een seen on any stage. Polaire brings been seen on any stage. Polaire brings her own company of French players, and her own musical director from Paris, for the all-star event. The drama calls for all the passionate talent possessed by Paris' most virile actress, and when it was presented by Polaire for a short run in the French capitol, it proved to be the most sensational offering she has ever made The date for the two-star aggregation here at the Grand is Friday evening

Mammoth Musical Success.

"The Dream Maiden," which comes to the Grand Saturday, matinee and night, is said to be a novelty in more ways than one. The idea of the operetta is wholly novel, being a humorous satire on heredity and reincarnation. and the music, interpreted by an orchestra of seventeen musicians, is said to be by far the best of many seasons. The play is called "A story, a song, a merry rhyme, a dance as in olden, golden time." The book and lyrics are by Allen Lowe, among whose successes on the American stages are: "Isle of Spice," "The Defender," "Golden Wedding," "Prince Petticoat," "Belle of tain evidently having become jammed Newport," and in all eighteen musical plays or operettas. The music is by Laszky, the Hungarian composer, who "The Sty Countess" and "l'Ecwrote centrique," and who has given to Europe most of its light musical successes. He is the husband of Mela Mars, whose wonderful reputation as a singer of comedy songs is wholly due to the clever material he has written for her. Heading the cast is the real find of the operetta season, Audrey Maple, a gloriously colored blonde, with a beautiful soprano voice in the mezzo range The leading male role is that of Louis, Prince of Hendonia, the dreamer, who masquerades as a jester and finds it much harder to be a merry man than a prince, and pays the price of his folly. Will Cameron, who played d up by the air that was held in her the low comedy role in "Madam Sherry," and who was the talk of two conwo streams of bubbles coming out of tinents in "The Belle of New York," the bow, and there seems to be no has the best part of his life as the own garb, but felt like a fool in the dress of a prince.

John Mogan, the former basso of the Boston Grand Opera Company, and for two years with Donald Brian, is the pleasure loving Duke of Bella-mere. The musical numbers are many, and while all are very high class, the big while all are very high class, the bighits are "Visions of Dreamland," "Twilight Is the Time for Love," "I Want To Go a-Fishing," "A Man and a Maid," "To Strains of Music," "The Best Bad Actor" and the rousing "Smith Song," telling of the foundation of that noble family.

Hamilton, Nov. 16.—In Knox Church this evening, Rev. Dr. S. Banks Nelson, in the course of a reference to the recent tragedy on the Great Lakes, ventured the opinion that the horror might have been due in part to steam having driven real saliormen off the lakes.

Speaking of the Titanic and Volturno disasters on the sea, he asked if it were possible that the same causes contributed to the recent horror which claimed three hundred lives.

The Titanic, he said, was the victim of commercial greed, but he hoped the same spirit had not selzed the lake as it has the Atlantic traffe, and that these great iron freighters were squipped with sufficient sation today was that people still teek
