Henry Allen to J. J. Dixon & Co.: The stock market lost a good deal of its snap to-day. Quotations boomed throughout the earlier hours, but it was a boom that did not last. Much stress is still laid upon the reforms and new combinations said to have coma into operation in the coal trade, but there is authority to-night for the statement that the recent reports of a coal trust are without foundation.

to sell caused a sharp decline all around and gave markets a nervous and unsettled closing at lowest points of the day. Provisions were affected like grain on account of the Washburne bill, and in addition were depressed by rumors of further financial trouble in southern stetes. Packers sold freely on the early advance, and commission houses were sellers on stop loss orders at the close. Markets are liable to be unsettled until a determination of the important measure now before Congress is reached and business becomes readjusted to any changes which may be made.
