EVERY year a number of people are swindled by travelling magazine canvassing agents with some wonderful proposition in which they give away more than you pay. Or perhaps it is an inside price that will never be offered again. However, there is always a "joker" somewhere. When the trouble is discovered the canvasser of course is nowhere to be found and when you write the company you are told they never authorized such a proposition. This is about the time of the year these "agents" operate and several have already been reported in this neighborhood.

A VERY sad fatal accident occurred last week at Forres, Sask., when Arthur the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mitchell (nee Fio McLeay) was instantly killed by an express train. From the information received it appears that the little child was sitting on his father's knee in an automobile. Three other men were in the car. The road they were travelling crossed the railway track. A long string of box cars on a siding prevented those in the auto from seeing the last express approaching on another track and while the auto was crossing the track it was struck by the engine, the occupants thrown out and the car ditched. None of the men was injured but when they went to pick up the child they found the little fellow had been killed. The many friends of the family in this section were shocked by the news and deeply sympathize with the parents and other relatives.

LADIES' tailor made suits made in Watford $22.50 to $27.50.—SWIFTS'.

A PETITION was in circulation in the early part of the week asking the Council to make a municipal park to the Trafalgar Day Red Cross appeal, the signers deeming this a better way than canvassing the town for individual donations. The plan of taking these subscriptions from the town treasury and placing the amount on the rateable property of the municipality is a good one so far as it goes. But how about the number of young men who are not on the assessment roll? Many of these no doubt are anxious to give, and all should contribute to some extent. No one in the town is more able to give than the young man who is drawing wages every week. He has few or no responsibilities, and there is not a young man in town who should not give at least a day's pay towards patriotic purposes at times of these special appeals. Let the young men be asked to contribute. Any one of them who cares anything for mother, sister or sweetheart, and whose mind is properly constituted, should be anxious to contribute according to his means.

Maternal Pride

The boy, after leaving home, had proved a success, and a proud woman was his mother, for she was a humble collier's widow.

"Yes, indeed, Meggie," she said to a friendly neighbor, "my boy's come on fine and does me proud."

"A regular gentleman, I don't doubt," said Meg, with a sarcastic smile and a toss of her head. "They do say 'e smokes cigars."

"Ah! that he does," agreed his mother, with pride; "an' wot d'ye think o' his latest? Why, in 'is last letter 'e was tellin' me 'ow 'e'd jost got the gout. There's nothin' that 'oboy o' mine won't 'ave if 'e wants it!"
