

as well as her principles ; that once enjoying, she should have been deprived of them, and that after a noble and voluntary effort to raise an endowment for a separate College, she should be denied its usual privileges, is a reproach to the age. Let us hope that time will soothe and overcome the violence of the opposition of those who now hold the reins of government, and that ere long Trinity College shall be in possession of its Royal Charter.

this
Go
of
him
for
dire
judg
proc
won
cour
This
on t
the
some
trust
and office
they
the n
servi
other