"Smallpox has developed in the second section of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, and the troops are said to be in quarantine at Durban, and likely to remain there for three months. Relatives in Ottawa of boys with the contingent have received no word of them since they left, and the fact goes to confirm the rumor that they are in isolation, pending the stamping out of the disease.

"Col. Pinault, the Deputy Minister of Militia, stated that, when the Victorian, which transported the second section, arrived at Cape Town, Colonel Evans, who was in command, cabled General O'Grady-Haly that, on the voyage, four or five of the men were seized with smallpox, but it was stated to be of a mild type. Since then, Col. Pinault says, the department has not been in receipt of any further
