MR. AND MRS. PORCUPINE ALMOST SPOIL THE RECEPTION. All the little people were placed in she shook hands with Mrs. Kanga-

All the little people were placed in line by Teddy Possum, Chief Usher. And the first to be introduced to Cousin Kate, were Mr. and Mrs. Cousin Kate, were Mr. and Mrs. Mink; and they bowed very politely, as their brand new and costly furs gleamed in the light. They tried to shake hands with Mrs. Kate Kangaroo, but they were both short and fat, that they couldn't possibly reach the little right hand of Mrs. Kangaroo. So Teddy Possum, the Chief Usher, came up, and stood on his hind legs as a stepladder; and Mrs. Mink gave a jump and alighted on the back of Teddy Possum; and when Mrs. Mink gave a jump and alighted on the back of Teddy Possum; and when Mrs. Mink gave a jump and alighted on the back of Teddy Possum; and when Mrs. Mink gave a fump and alighted on the back of Teddy Possum; and when Mrs. Mink gave and tore a big hole, and brought the blood; and Teddy Possum gave an awful yell of pain. But Teddy was a game sort of chap; and he ran and changed his clothes and the reception went on.

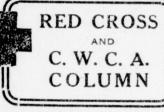

She Certainly Looked Very Beautiful as ok Hands With Mrs. Kangaroo!

Mrs. Kangaroo, they gathered around her to ask questions. It was a funny sight, indeed. Mrs. Kangaroo sat on her hind legs, supported by her big and strong tall. And she looked as all as a bear, when he sits up like a man. And all the little people tried to be polite, and they tried to sit up just like Mrs. Kangaroo. You would have snickered to see them all try

Miss Arly Weber of this city and Charles Russell Clark of Company "A", 8th Engineers (mounted), U. S. A. were united in marriage on September 4, at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

A most enjoyable evening was spent on Friday last when Miss Gladys Burt, of 281 Egerton street gave an informal party celebrating her nineteenth birthday. About forty friends were present and spent the evening in singing, dancing and playing numerous games. The feature of the occasion was the presenting of a handsome cameo ring to the hostess, the presentation being made by Miss Alice Reading, and a suitable address being read by Miss Alice Andrews. Refreshments were served and the party dispersed after a served and the party dispersed after a the mothers at times, and they, bless them, are the most uncomplaining dears in the world. I read a letter not long ago to "Pan," of the Toronto Star, in which the writer said she would love so to help work on a farm, but could not leave "Mother." "Pan," in her bright way, urged her to go in strongly for "mother-etting" as the greatest thing under the sun, and leave the "farmeretting" to other less fortunate girls. Now, is not that a lovely idea? Let's all of us who be "mother-ettes," and

Ans.—Honestly, it's difficult to imagine you a dallier; your letter seems to businesslike and to the point. Dull One will be pleased to see your pork curing recipe. Here is a reader's catsup recipe which I hope may be to your liking:

Tomato Catsup.—Slice tomatoes, boil and strain; to a gallon of juice add one quart cider vinegar and salt to suit taste; mix 1 ounce whole black pepper, 1 ounce whole allspice, ½ ounce whole cloves, ½ ounce whole ginger (bruised), and 3 red pepers cut in small pieces; place these spices in a cheesecloth bag and boil in the catsup two hours or more, until of the desired thickness. Near the last add 1 pound brown sugar and ¼ pound of mustard, dissolved in a little cold vinegar.

A Mother's View of Spanking. Dear Miss Grey,—I failed to receive "W. B. M.'s" envelope, so I sent the books to you and I'll trust to you that she gets them. I also have the words and music of "My Old New Hampshire Home," so if the person that asked for it would be sure to return it I will send it to them or you, and you can send it on.—

on.
You asked me if I am in favor of the old-fashioned spanking. I am glad to say no. I think it has been the ause of more than one, yes many, untily, unconquerable children. But if a hipping is promised as a punish or disobedience I say be sure an nce I say be sure and not for disobedience I say be sure and not forget to give it.

There is a better way to punish a child, and do it in a more human way. Tell them the penalty of disobedience and talk to them, reason with them, hear their views, and get to understand your child; don't whip or scold them without good reason. Nine children out of ten don't know what they are punished for; some parents have a habit of slapping, which only aggravates, and too many flog or kick—that is too much like brute for me. When I punish mine, it all depends on which one it is, because the method I use for one wouldn't do at all for the other. Then, too, I regulate it according to

Dear Miss Grey,—As this is my last half-holiday, I thought I would celebrate it by writing to your department. Someone called you "Dear Patient Miss Grey." I wonder if they really know how much of that useful article is required in the newspaper line. I have been in a country office for quite a number of years, and, Oh, my! how it does try one. Am inclosing addressed (Yankee Girl). If any one of your readers with asthma, this gives relief: Soak blottling paper in saltpetre, then dry, and burn a small piece in room at night, or when needed. I see so many asking for names of lonely soldiers. I suppose they mean the ones of whatever it may be. When in waist measure, when misses' or child's pathen.
