

PARENTS REUNITED BY FINDING SON

Married at 16, Stewarts Separated when Child was Born Eleven Years Ago—Will Make a New Home.

New York, July 31.—Russell Stewart, 21, who was found abandoned in a furnished room in New York, S. I., a month ago, has been claimed at the rooms of the Children's Society in Tompkinsville by his father and mother, Mrs. and Mrs. Donald Stewart, who had been separated since his birth. Finding of the boy after nearly four years' search by the mother was attended by a re-union celebration and the announced determination of the parents to found a home in which their son might obtain parental care.

The fight of a young mother against starvation and her final decision to give the boy up for adoption, only to discover later when she did want to get her son back that the man to whom she had entrusted him had disappeared, comes to light through the re-union of the Stewart family.

Agents of the Children's Society have learned that Donald Stewart and Marion Parker were married in 1908 when they were seventeen and sixteen years of age respectively. Religious differences caused them to separate on different occasions and led to a final break in 1911 when Russell was born. Mrs. Stewart then resumed her maiden name, calling herself Mrs. Parker, and did various kinds of domestic work which enabled her to keep her son with her. There came a time, however, when she found it necessary to put the child in a home, where he remained for eleven months, and eventually she decided to let somebody adopt her boy. That was in January, 1918. An advertisement offering the boy for adoption was inserted in the New York newspaper.

A man who described himself as Richard A. Field, a superintendent in the Bethlehem Steel Works, Bethlehem, Pa., called on Mrs. Stewart and asserted he and his wife were looking for just such a youngster. He showed Mrs. Stewart photographs of what he said was his home in Bethlehem and gave as references the names of the mayor, postmaster and other officials of that city. Mrs. Stewart was duly impressed and let "Mr. Field" have the boy on a probationary period of three months. She said that if she had not obtained work by that time the adoption would become permanent. Mr. Field was agreeable and took the boy away.

Mrs. Stewart obtained employment before the time was up and began looking for "Mr. Field" only to find he had disappeared. Then began the search for Russell which continued for four years. There were no clues until June 14, when the boy was taken from the furnished room house in New York to the Children's Society.

She told her story to the authorities but they were incredulous because the boy did not recognize his mother. They insisted Mrs. Stewart produce her husband, where whereabouts she did not know at the time. Through friends she succeeded, however, in learning where he was employed in Jersey City and he agreed to go to the rooms of the Children's Society with his wife. They brought their marriage certificate, the boy's birth certificate and photographs of Russell which had been taken before he was lost.

Officers of the society accepted the identification and turned the boy over to the couple. The reunited family left Tompkinsville in an arm, intent upon founding the new Stewart home somewhere in New Jersey. In the meanwhile Mrs. Stewart is stopping with an aunt at 219 West 122nd street.

HOW GAMBLING LEADS TO CRIME

Women as Well as Men are Tempted—But Ontario Shares the Spoils.

Detroit, July 31.—Race-track losses are responsible for the troubles of Gladys Walker, former Ingersoll, Ontario, girl, now of Toronto, she told Judge Heston last week. She never would have been arrested for defrauding a hotel, she said, but for her weakness in yielding to temptation to play horses at Windsor. "I came here from Toronto and stayed at the Fort Shelby Hotel," she admitted. "I bet on the races, and I lost over and over."

"Then just as I reached the end of my money, I was taken sick. I did leave the hotel without settling. But it was circumstances, not any intention of my own, that drove me."

Judge Heston accepted Miss Walker's plea of not guilty and fixed bail at $500, pending a hearing. He is to have a $50 bill at the Fort Shelby and another bill at the Statler.

Detroit, July 27.—Wesley Wing, thirty-two years old, who gambled on horses and lost, pleaded guilty to uttering and publishing two worthless checks today. Wing was a deputy sheriff for more than three years.

"He lost his job on account of persistent gambling, and pressure of the landlord for back rent and nervous insistence of his wife for money drove him to desperation," said the report to Judge Keldan by the probation officer.

"I played the handbooks in Detroit and lost," Wing told the court. "Then I gambled at the track in Windsor to recover, and lost again."

Judge Keldan, learning that Wing had obtained a job as a pressman, and believing that he would stay away from handbooks and race-tracks in the future, put him on probation again, this time for two years.

Windsor, July 27.—The gambling at Kenilworth Park yesterday was a progressive affair—the freest crowd held nothing back; it bet more and more on each race.

By the time the bettors had played seven races on the unbettable pari-mutuel machines they had bet $95,607 and lost $84,052—or thirty-five per cent. of the money played.

Of the $95,607 bet, the track took $13,047 and the provincial government $21,005. The gamblers got back only $61,555. (Toronto Globe.)

The going is getting worse for the race-track gamblers around Windsor, and they seem to be awakening to that fact. On Tuesday the total raised at Kenilworth Park was only $88,691, says the Detroit News, whereas $100,000 used to be considered normal.

Out of the $88,691 which the gamblers paid into the pari-mutuel machines they never saw again $22,070, which went in "take-offs" to the Jockey Club and the Ontario government. In addition to this "sweetening" of $12,070 the gamblers paid $31,109 for admission to the track, making a total loss of $65,149, which, as The Detroit News says, "was just as certain before the races started as after."

To make matters still worse for the gamblers the favorites seldom win, and on those that did win the odds were so short that the plungers failed to get back enough to recoup them for their losses on the other races.

Tuesday was the seventeenth racing day around Windsor, and in those seventeen days the gamblers lost $615,829 on the pari-mutuel machines alone without counting admission and other expenses. There are still twenty-five more racing days at Windsor this season. Will the gamblers quit, or are they game to stand a loss of over a million dollars?

MAINE SURVEY

Pres. Gulnac Outlines Broad Scope of Work to Determine Possibilities of Development.

(Bangor Commercial.)

Broad indeed is the scope of the work laid out for the State Chamber of Commerce by the president, James G. Gulnac, as outlined at a meeting called by him of the Maine Association of Commercial Secretaries held at the Falmouth hotel in Portland, Tuesday.

Pointing out the fact that Maine has resources as great as any state in the union and exceeding those of many states, President Gulnac called attention to the fact that while some of the cities in the state are gaining in population, Maine is losing as a whole. The remedy for this, he argued, as the development of Maine's wonderful resources, and in order to do this he said that the thing to do is to make a thorough survey of the state to obtain a true estimate of what Maine has to offer to the person who may be attracted by its farms, its industrial opportunities or its tourist resources.

The work of obtaining this survey will fall upon the secretaries of local Chambers of Commerce or Boards of Trade and in places where neither of these organizations exist, the help of public-spirited men and women will be called on to furnish this data, which will be of inestimable value. The work will require unity of effort and will establish a strong link between the state and local Chambers of Commerce and will serve to get the local Chambers themselves together on a project that will be of equal value to all. Mr. Gulnac said that if it could be shown that it is the desire to get more people into Maine, the state organization is ready to go ahead.

He told of the visit of Immigration Commissioner Husband, who recently came to Portland and assured Mr. Gulnac that he was willing to render all possible assistance in landing people there for the farms of Maine. The thrifty, intelligent people, who make agriculture their occupation and who will re-occupate the neglected farms in the state and cause them to bring forth the products which will enrich the state and incidentally each locality, where they should settle.

The survey of Kennebec county and adjacent territory, which is not otherwise taken care of, will be made by the Waterville Chamber of Commerce working in conjunction with the Augusta Chamber of Commerce at the request of President Gulnac. At the close of the survey it is expected that full particulars regarding the agricultural, industrial and tourist resources of Kennebec county will be on file at the Chamber of

Now that I know how to use Rinso—why it's just splendid.

Knowing how to use Rinso correctly means finding workless wash days. It's well worth while. Let us ask—are you making the same mistake as Mrs. Carr?

WHAT WAS MRS. CARR'S MISTAKE?

She forgot that Rinso is not the same as ordinary soap, flakes or washing powders. She did not give Rinso an opportunity to show its wonderful power of washing clothes clean just by soaking. She used to put Rinso direct from the package into the tub without first making the famous Rinso liquid.

The result was that the fine granules of soap essence of Rinso were not properly dissolved and their value was not spread evenly through the wash so as to loosen all the dirt in every garment—ready to come away in the rinse. The result of course was disappointing.

THE PROPER WAY TO USE RINSO

Now this is the proper way to use Rinso—for ordinary washing—For each tubful of clothes take half a package of Rinso put in a little cool water and stir until it is in a cream thoroughly dissolved. Add two quarts of boiling water and stir well. When the froth subsides there will be a clear amber coloured liquid. Partly fill your tub with cool or lukewarm water and add the Rinso liquid. Put the clothes in, so that each is covered and soak the things thoroughly overnight. Do not just dip them up and down.

In the morning rinse the clothes until the water runs clear. Only soiled collars and cuff edges may need a slight rubbing with your fingers. No need for washboard or boiler—just wring and dry.

EXTRA SOILED GARMENTS

Greasy or badly soiled garments—soak overnight in lukewarm Rinso suds, first rub a little moistened Rinso as it comes from the package on badly soiled spots. Next morning add warm water and rinse. The dirt will just float away entirely.

FOR THE WASHING MACHINE

Rinso is splendid. Soak the clothes for one hour, two hours, overnight, or as long as convenient, then add a little fresh Rinso liquid and operate the machine. Rinse thoroughly and the clothes are clean—all the dirt will run away. Follow these simple directions and you will be delighted. Monday after Monday, with the Rinso way of washing.

The details of the agricultural survey will include all particulars about soil and climate, crop possibilities, local markets and their possibilities, banking facilities, labor condition, transportation facilities, educational, health and social conditions, available farms and facts concerning them. The industrial survey will include facts about present industries, further industrial possibilities, living conditions, banking facilities, transportation facilities, health and educational facilities. The tourist survey will embrace facts in regard to local attractions, hotel and restaurant facilities, location and further possibilities.

Work in hand is an absolute selling project, the idea being to sell the almost unlimited possibilities of the State of Maine to people from other parts of the country and also from other countries. The state pier now being built at Portland will be of great help in this matter, as it will constitute a direct means of shipment both into and out of Maine. In booming Maine as a state, each town or city must necessarily receive some of the benefits, and the results will be found to be, it is believed by those interested, entirely worth while.

SHOULD BUY NOVA SCOTIA COAL
Discussing the question of Canada's coal supply, H. A. Harrington, manager of the Coal Exchange of Canada, and former fuel controller for Ontario, said that Ontario must learn to take her coal from Nova Scotia, whose resources are not half developed for lack of demand. He said that coal could be easily transported from Nova Scotia to that province. Mr. Harrington also said that he could see no immediate prospect of a settlement of the present coal strike in the United States. It is thought that about twenty of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine ships could be used for the coal carrying trade.
