BAKERS MUST PUT STAMP ON THEIR BREAD

Report Taken Up in Police Court—An Offer to Bet $5 With Policeman Lucas

There is a feeling among the bakers of the city that the by-law requiring them to place stamps upon every loaf of bread which they manufacture, is one which does not give general satisfaction either to themselves or to the consumers, but until it has been abolished or amended they must comply with the regulations or be subject to a fine of $25. They claim that 80 per cent of the householders do not like the stamps being placed on their bread.

This morning the names of the following bakers—St. Clair McKel, G. H. Smith, Mrs. Belle Norman, John Irving and Wm. McLoughlin—were called in court to answer to a report made by Policeman Lucas that they had not stamped their bread according to the by-law. Messrs. McLoughlin and Irving were not present; Mr. McKel said he had no stamps on his bread, and Mr. Smith said he had no stamps on his bread, while Mr. Smith said that all the bread had been stamped.

Lucas—"I looked at the bread in the shop, Your Honor, and the stamps were not on any of it."

Smith—"That's not right. I'll bet you $5000 there were stamps on it."

The Honor suggested that they had better be careful as there was a law against betting with a police officer, and he might have to pay out fifty in a fine.

The matter was allowed to stand for the present, and the bakers were told to be careful in the future and to stamp their bread according to the by-law.
