Notes and Suggestions of Practical Utility
FOR THE FARM, FIELD, GARDEN AND DAIRY.
Cleanings of Interest for Our Country Readers.
Sow turnips for your sheep.
It pays to raise roots for sheep.
Mutton is a good keeping meat.
Every farmer needs a few sheep.
Don't mow your lawn too close.
Make your granary termite proof.
Comfort is a great milk producer.
Cut clover for the pigs next winter.
We land is not suitable for sheep.
Rich hay does not grow on poor soil.
It doesn't pay to raise pigs by hand.
Relieve the overloaded trees of fruit.
Save seed from early maturing stalks.
Underlain and gravel the highways.
Dose plums with unglazed lime.
Have horse collars open at the bottom.
Sorb feed and scrub stock go together.
Pay as you go is pleasant and peaceful.
Pasture grass fed too closely will die out.
If you grumble, don't waste any time at it.
Stitch eggs keep better than fertile ones.
You cannot strain out dirt from your milk.
Keep the ground loose around the fruit trees.
Put thought into your work; it will pay.
Plants not watered stand through the best.
All orchards should be well underdrained.
Wire setting makes a good support for peas.
Overfeeding and drinking cause much sickness.
How to thin out fruit—let in a pack of boys.
A man should use method, even in his maddness.
A quarrelsome cow is not likely to be profitable.
Carelessness is the worst enemy of the farmer.
A few fat animals to sell is a good thing to have.
It does none and men go to scratch for a living.
A tight hay is better than an open one to keep hay.
Mistakes may be made, but should not be repeated.
Fly nets on cows are as good as on horses. Why not?
Frequent change of pastures gives appetite and vigor.
The best egg plant you ever saw was a nickel one.
Remember fruit trees do not feed on grass and weeds.
Don't try to grow too many stalks to the square foot.
All soils must have humus or decayed vegetable matter.
Do we send our best butter to Europe?
Those sheep in the dry pasture on the hill need water.
An underdrained soil plowed deep is best to stand drought.
Root pruning is sometimes necessary as top pruning.
Running out of debt is not as easy as running into debt.
The diffusion of practical knowledge is rapidly increasing.
God made man a social being; the devil made him a trader.
A great deal of corn hoing can be done with the harrow.
Have a plow on the farm and let the bull guide the grain.
If you breed from poor stock, you must expect poor progeny.
The large and wealthy farmer should lead in the use of machinery.
A cool and rather moist atmosphere is best for raising cream.
No soil should be allowed to stand bare and waste its nitrogen.
The winter the season the nearer the surface the roots grow.
Only five per cent of those who engage in trade are successful.
An enlightened agriculture is the foundation of all progress.
"Allow grass to get well rooted, before it is tramped on by stock.
Two crops of hay on the same land are worth more than one.
Common on the farm what is grown on it, as far as practicable.
It sometimes pays to harrow and seed an old pasture or meadow.
The quality of the seed largely determines the quality of the crop.
Plain diet and plenty of time to eat it are promoters of health.
Don't be afraid of salting your mutton while it is in the pasture.
A light mulch around vegetables aids in their development.
There is no such thing as a free lunch.
Never put the best at the bottom, is the rule among fruit growers.
Oil meals vary a good deal in the per cent of fat, and hence in value.
Flaxseed in small quantities is good to mix with all other kinds of feed.
The saving of little wastes is a source of great economy on the farm.
The dairyman who buys his dairy stock will not make much progress.

ANECDOTES, HAPPENINGS AND GENERAL COMMENTS
Clipped and Condensed for the Readers of The Globe.
Lord Salisbury and Sir William Harcourt weigh eighteen stone each.
The number of newspapers published in all countries is estimated at 41,000, 24,000 appearing in Europe.
The first trial of inoculation for smallpox in England was made on a capital convict—on a criminal condemned to death.
There are over 3,000 miles of canals in the United Kingdom. About half of these are owned by the railway companies.
The longest through service on any railway in the world is on the Southern Pacific line between New Orleans and San Francisco, 2,465 miles.
In the Peninsular War, for every Frenchman killed there was sent out by England the weight of a man in lead, or eight times his weight in iron.
The estimate of the world's population in 1890 is as follows:—Europe, 380,000,000; Asia, 850,000,000; Africa, 127,000,000; Australia, 4,700,000; North America, 89,000,000; South America, 98,000,000; total, 1,487,600,000.
Although whales grow to enormous size, sometimes 80 feet and even 90 feet long, the throat is so small that it cannot swallow a bite as large as a tea-spoon. This applies to the common whale; the sperm whale has a mouth large enough to swallow a man.
David Livingstone, the great African explorer, when only nine years old, was admitted to memory the 119th Psalm, and repeated it publicly on two successive evenings, with only five slight errors. For this he was rewarded by the gift of a New Testament.
To keep flowers fresh and to make them last longer, fill the jar or vase intended to hold them nearly full with freshly-pounded charcoal; add water until thoroughly saturated; put the stalks of the flowers into the charcoal; add a little more water; keep the charcoal moist by adding fresh water daily.
Before the Indians of Sagas was placed by the canal, there were scarcely any sharks in the Mediterranean, the passage through the Straits of Gibraltar not being to their liking. Now, however, they come in by way of the canal, and in such numbers that in more than one watering-place on the Mediterranean and also on the Adriatic, the sign has gone up, "Beware of sharks."
Two boys who are joined at the waist, and have but one set of lower organs, are being exhibited at the Waxwork Exhibition at Berlin. They are thirteen years old. They cannot walk, for the one thin pair of legs will not support the weight of the two bodies. One boy likes sweets, the other does not; one plays tricks with cards, the other draws. They have quite different tastes, and they sometimes quarrel over the slightest trifles.
Over the mantelpiece of an old inn in Lincolnshire may be found this droll enigma:—"A man without eyes saw plums on a tree. Neither took plums nor left plums. Pray how can that be?" The answer just below the enigma is, "The man hadn't eyes, but he had just one eye. With which on the tree two plums he could spy; he neither took plums nor plums did he leave. But took one and left one, as we may conceive."
Bismarck, when asked whether he would have memories to be published, like Talleyrand's, sixty years after his death, replied, "If I live another ten years an installment of my memoirs will be published whilst I am alive. And he added, "I should like to be alive to defend my memoirs against contradiction. I can guess what would be written about them if I were dead; and I should jump in my coffin if some men were able to give me the lie with impunity."
ENGLISH CAPITALISTS, who are said to own the electrical works at Deperford, have made a "deal" with the Niagara Falls Commissioners, and they will set to work to utilize the power of the Falls to generate electricity. The great strength of the Falls will afford an enormous high voltage for the motive power for lighting the manufacturing towns within a radius of 150 miles. They have deposited $30,000, which will be forfeited if the works are not started by March, 1892. They will pay for the privilege $25,000 a year for the first ten years, rising to $30,000 in twenty years.
One night Fechter was playing in a melodrama of a tragic cast. In one part of the play Fechter had to count out money. He was very deliberate, and said, slowly: "One, two, three, four, five, and so on. The interest of the play was hanging on that tragedian's having enough money, and paying it over to the villain. He kept slowly counting, and the audience grew more restless and anxious for him to finish. A witty son of Erin in the gallery, getting tired, yelled:—"I say, Mr. Fechter, give him a cheque!"

JUGLES OF HONOR.
A Little Nonense Gathered for Leisure Reading.
The parents of twins named, one child Simul and the other Taneous, because they were born at the same time.
Tommy: "What is fame, pa."
Pa.: "Neglect while you're alive, and a monument when you're dead, my son."
Men can be found who are willing to go to Africa as missionaries, who are not willing to take care of a cross baby for a tired wife for half an hour.
"He referred me to you as his hostess."
"And I certainly can't do him through-ly. Why, my dear sir, I'd trust that man with— with my umbrella."
"Now mind," said a servant girl to a li-berian, when she was sent for books, "that you give me the right one. So far, I've had to change every book I've got here."
"How is it that Luckhig always wins at the races?"
"Why, he always consults the 'tips' given in the daily papers, and then bets on another horse."
Mr. Stuchup suddenly grew rich, pump-pany! "The question is, young man, can you support my daughter in the style in which she is accustomed to live?"
Young Man: "Well, sir, it depends on what period of her existence you mean."
At a negro wedding, when the minister read the words "love, honour, and obey," the groom interrupted him and said, "Head dat nigra, ah; read it wunose mo' ag; de lady kin ketch the fall solemnity ob de mean- in'." I've been married beto'.
Awestruck Visitor (in artistic studio): "It must be a very difficult to produce such an exquisite work of art."
Mr. Danber: "Nonsense! Almost every body can paint a picture, but finding a rich fellow to buy it after it is painted is where the art comes in."
Mrs. Brown: "And what are you going to give Maud Gray for a bridal present Mr. White?"
Mr. White: "Oh, I've settled upon some-thing that I thought lovely, and I know it is just the thing she would like."
Mrs. Brown: "What is it? Do tell me."
Mr. White: "A packet of letters she wrote me while we were engaged."
A schoolmaster said he talked to himself for two reasons—first, he liked to talk to a sensible man; second, he liked to hear a man of sense talk.
The will of a rich man of the future will read: "To the respective layens acting for my children I give my entire estate and worldly goods of all descriptions. Personally to my children and to my beloved wife I give all that remains." This testament will satisfy the family and save the trouble of proving the testator insane.
A lady who has been abroad was describing some of the sights of her trip to a party of friends. "But what pleased me as much as anything," she said, "was the wonderful clock at Strasbourg." "Oh, how I should love to see it," gulped a pretty young woman in pink. "I am so interested in such things. And did you see the celebrated watch on the Rhine, too?"

English Joint-Stock Bank.
The Bank of England is simply the banker of the government, and is not a government establishment in any other sense. It was the first joint-stock bank established in England, and having exclusive privileges in the metropolis, granted by Royal Charter, it continued the only joint-stock bank in London till 1834. At that date the London and West- minster Bank was founded, and proceed- ed so successfully that it was quickly followed by the formation of the London Joint-Stock, the Union Joint-Stock, Lon- don and County, etc. At the present time the total capital, paid up and re- served, of the various joint-stock banks amounts to more than £150,000,000.
